Il Duce Rejects France, Britain As Conciliators

Stand of Baron Aloisi, Geneva Delegate, Causes Consternation Among Diplomats; Plan to Set Up Special Commission Banned.

Representatives of Italy Leave As Spokesman for Ethiopia Rises

Poland Withdraws From Council Over Italian Attitude; Possibility of Forming Arbitration Group Grows More Remote.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Geneva, Sept. 5.—Italy tonight again threw a monkey wrench into the League's conciliation machinery by refusing to permit Great Britain and France to serve on a special commission to consider the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia.

Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Italian delegate, who was in frequent telephone communication with Premier Benito Mussolini at Rome, placed a barrier against the two powers which have sought to dissuade Italy from war by offers of concessions in Ethiopia.

Italy's stand was revealed shortly before the Council was scheduled to open its second public session on the Italo-Ethiopian question. It caused consternation among diplomats, who hurriedly conferred, deferring meeting over an hour until 7:20 p. m.

Council members had hoped to turn the problem over to a commission tonight, but Aloisi's ultimatum ended that hope.

Italy's refusal to accept France and Britain as members of the commission caused Poland tonight to withdraw. There was only a remote possibility of forming a commission from the remaining council members, Spain, Turkey, Portugal, Denmark and Cechoslovakia—and still remoter chance of such a commission producing an effective solution.

Walk From Chamber.

The Council meeting was only a few minutes old when the Italian delegation sprang a sensation that rocked the meeting to its foundations.

As Gaston Jeze, famous French jurist and Ethiopian legal expert, began his defense against Italy's charge that Haile Selassie's empire was savage and unfit for League membership, the Italian delegates arose and marched from the chamber.

Jeze paused, nonplused. A hush spread over the galleries. Faces of diplomats, tense in the hour of crisis to peace and the whole League structure, blanched.

"Has Italy quit the League as she threatened?" everyone asked.

In a few moments the Italians made it clear that the withdrawal did not mean Italy's departure from Geneva.

A spokesman said it was a protest against Jeze, who had launched into his case with a demand that the council "unmask Italy's sinister designs."

The dramatic gesture—bearing out Italy's indication, that so far as she is concerned Ethiopia no longer is in the League—was believed engineered by Aloisi, although he was not present with his delegation. Guido Rocco, head of the League of Nations section of the Italian foreign office, was in charge.

Secretary Gives Word.

Rocco listened stolidly to the first part of Jeze's speech. Then the secretary to the Italian delegation entered the council room and whispered in Rocco's ear.

Rocco signaled the rest of Italy's representatives and they marched out of the silent chamber.

An Italian spokesman said Italy would return to the council table when Jeze had finished presenting Ethiopia's legal case.

"This is the first time in League history that insulting language has been used at the council table—that is why we withdrew," the spokesman said.

During the dramatic events in the council chamber Aloisi was busy telephoning Mussolini concerning the much more important, though less spectacular, development regarding the conciliation commission.

Some believed Italy's refusal to allow formation of a representative commission was the rock on which the League's peace ship was doomed to crash, despite weeks of careful navigating by Britain and France.

Aloisi reportedly refused to accept those nations as members because "they have interests involved."

Capt. Anthony Eden, British delegate, nervously puffed a cigaret as the Italians withdrew. Premier Pierre Laval stared straight ahead, ignoring the incident until the door had closed behind the Italians. Then the swarthy little Frenchman

London Places Cabinet Upon 24-Hour Call

War Chiefs Convened Over Ethiopian Crisis; Fleet Is Better Prepared Now.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 5.—Defense reinforcement measures decided upon secretly a fortnight ago were reviewed today by a skeleton cabinet, a group comprising most members of the imperial defense council.

This "war cabinet" met under Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin immediately after he returned from a vacation in France to assume personal command of the government.

[The United Press reported Britain's cabinet was placed on 24-hour call because of the gravity of the international situation. —Eitor's note.]

If new warship or troop movements are under way they remained secret. The last movement of significance was disclosed yesterday, when the admiralty announced an aircraft carrier and several "minor units" were en route to the Mediterranean but refused to disclose the names of the ships.

Baldwin found from his ministers that Britain is much better prepared to enforce its will in the Mediterranean than she was in mid-August, when the admiralty reportedly said it was not ready for action.

Now, however, the bulk of the Mediterranean fleet is anchored with steam up close to the mouth of the Suez Canal, protective measures are being rushed on the Island of Malta, the home fleet is standing by Portland awaiting orders and garrison reinforcements are steaming to Malta to man new guns to be installed there.

These developments were put through after Premier Mussolini announced maneuvers shortly which will bring the Italian fleet off south Sicily. This area, strategists believe, is the Achilles heel

French, British Records Held Here for Study by Nye's Board.

By the Associated Press.

Acting as a mediator between the Senate Munitions Committee and the governments of Great Britain and France, the State Department has taken custody of a truck load of J. P. Morgan & Co. records.

These ledgers, accounts, letters and papers of all kinds, cover financial transactions carried on by the New York banking house as fiscal agent for the two governments between 1914 and 1917, when the United States was a neutral.

The records were brought from New York to the State Department August 19 in a guarded, heavily loaded truck. They now are locked in a thick-walled room.

Committee investigators have access to the documents there. They receive the key from a State Department official and turn it over to him when they leave. Records are not taken from the room.

The plan was worked out after the two governments objected to having the records turned over to the Senate committee. They presented to the State Department the view that the records of transactions carried on for them by their fiscal agent were their property. As such, their representatives contended the files should be immune to seizure by a Senate committee.

After discussions with committee officials, Morgan Co. officers and representatives of the governments, State Department officials arrived at the arrangement under which the

Rescue of Dixie's Passengers Completed; Captain Tells Story

Escape From Raging Seas Without Loss of Life Seen as Miracle; Master and Crew Lauded for Calmness; Damage to Vessel $500,000.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 5.—In a series of rescues packed with gallantry and maritime efficiency, all of the 231 passengers and most of the crew of the grounded and shattered Morgan liner Dixie were brought safely ashore tonight after three harrowing days in hurricane-lashed waters off the Florida Keys.

Aboard the Dixie, hurled onto French Reef Monday night by a howling tropical storm, there remained only Capt. E. W. Sundstrom and a skeleton crew. Two Coast Guard cutters stood by the disabled vessel as a precautionary measure.

The rescue work, interrupted Wednesday night by heavy seas after 164 passengers and crew were removed, was concluded swiftly today with the transfer of the remaining 121 passengers and some of the crew to assisting vessels.

Capt. Sundstrom, haggard from long duty on the bridge and suffering from injuries to his back and legs, still paced the hurricane deck of the 8,100-ton coastal liner.

In the afternoon he received aboard A. S. Hebble, superintending engineer of the owners, and began a survey of the wrecked, water-soaked interior of the vessel and its smashed keel plates in an effort to judge the amount of damage.

A figure of $500,000 was set by disinterested maritime authorities as the amount of damage suffered by the Dixie.

Captain Relates Story.

The captain, interviewed by a representative of the Miami Daily News and the Associated Press aboard the Dixie, gave the first inkling of the conditions which caused his command to shatter itself on French Reef in the midst of the hurricane which ravaged the Florida keys.

He said he was unable to see because of terrific rains, and was blown out of his position to a degree that he believed himself on Carysfort Reef when he sent out his SOS at 8:16 p. m.—a call for help which was unheard because his radio antenna was carried away.

"I had not seen a light since we picked up and passed Sombrero Lighthouse," he said in his first public account of the wreck.

"The waves were breaking over the bridge, which is 55 feet above the waterline. At times could not

Five-Day Rain To End Today; 5.35-Inch Fall

Hurricane Force Is Felt in Virginia; No Danger of Floods Here.

Washington's five-day rainfall, which has drenched the Capital with 5.35 inches of water, will end this afternoon, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

As southern Maryland farmers counted at least $100,000 damage yesterday in the wake of the "twister" which ripped through farmlands late Wednesday night and early yesterday morning, the weather forecaster here promised definite relief from dismal, weeping, gray skies.

This afternoon will not be bright and sunny the Weather Bureau warned, but cloudy, with the temperature in the low 60's. The week-end, however, will be fair.

Excessive humidity again approached the saturation point of 100 per cent yesterday, averaging 95 throughout the day. When the saturation point is reached fog follows, and sometimes before, the Weather Bureau said. A humidity of 54 per cent is regarded as normal.

There is slight connection between the District's dreary, continual rainfall and the hurricane thundering death and destruction in Florida officials at the Weather Bureau explained last night.

A wave of hot air from Bermuda and Puerto Rico, which absorbed a large quantity of moisture crossing the Gulf Stream and the Caribbean Sea is responsible for the excessive humidity, the forecaster said.

The hurricane, which is moving north, probably will be felt little, if at all, in the District. Badly spent, it will sweep to sea between Cape Hatteras and the Virginia Capes, according to the Weather Bureau.

Despite the downpour, there seemed no danger of floods in and about Washington. The Fifth and Sixth Police Precinct houses reported their basements slightly flooded, along with shops, stores and other buildings in their vicinity.

The Sewer Department and the Fire Department reported no emer-

British Sailors Rescue 1,100 On Two Ships

Doric Passengers Removed as Band Plays After Sea Collision.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 5.—British seamanship scored a double triumph today by saving the lives of more than 1,100 passengers aboard English ships after two dangerous accidents at sea.

While the band played "Tipperary" 736 passengers, many of them singing lustily, were taken from the crippled cruise ship Doric early this morning off the coast of Portugal by two other liners flying the Union Jack.

The second accident occurred this evening in the English Channel as the coastal paddle steamer Whippingham sprang a leak, but the 400 passengers were able to remain aboard when the ship was taken in tow by a sister side-wheeler.

Searchlights and flares lit the pre-dawn rescue scene off Cape Finisterre as the Doric's passengers were moved to safety. Little the worse for their experience, more than half of them were taken aboard the Orion of the Orient Line and the rest were transferred to the Viceroy of India of the P. & O. line. Both vessels proceeded to London.

The Doric, known as "Cupid's ship" because of engagements resulting from its cruises, was seriously damaged in her hull when she crashed into the French steamer Formigny. She was limping slowly under her own power tonight to Vigo, Spain. The Formigny was not badly hurt.

Funeral Pyres at Scene of Death May Prove Necessary for Victims

Other Estimates of Loss of Life Range From 400 to 1,000; Soldiers Relief Unit Is Set up by Red Cross.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 5.—The casualty list in the Florida Keys from the tropical hurricane was placed tonight at 256 dead and 252 injured in an "official count" by the Red Cross as a controversy developed over failure to evacuate the hundreds of World War veterans among whom were most of the victims.

The casualty report was made to President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y., by Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, retired, chairman of the American Red Cross.

It came while weary relief workers carried on their difficult and gruesome search for the dead, with the possibility cremation in funeral pyres might be resorted to in disposal of the bodies, many of them war veterans engaged in a road-building project in the keys.

Meanwhile, Gov. Dave Sholtz, en route to the keys storm area, said "great carelessness somewhere" was responsible for the tragedy.

Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator in Washington, asserted in reply to demand for an investigation of failure to evacuate the war veterans ahead of the devastating hurricane:

"I think it was a terrible and a shocking disaster, but I don't think, from reading those weather reports—which I've been reading—that anybody would necessarily have evacuated those people."

1,000 Deaths Held "Absurd."

Prior to this, Charles C. Clark, acting chief of the Weather Bureau at Washington, said that "from our advisories and forecasts, apparently ample notice was given of the danger and approach of this hurricane."

Before Admiral Grayson's report on the casualties, an estimate that the death toll might reach 1,000 was made to Gov. Sholtz by W. P. Mooty, of Miami, his personal representative in the storm area. This was characterized as "an absurdity" by L. K. Thompson, Red Cross disaster relief chairman in the section, who estimated the dead at between 270 and 300.

M. E. Gilfond, director of the Florida Emergency Relief Administration at Key West, gave as his opinion that 400 veterans were killed in the storm.

256 Known Dead Listed.

"Loss of civilians throughout the country and property damage is great," Gilfond said in a radio dispatch to the mainland.

In a telephonic conversation, Admiral Grayson told the President:

"The Red Cross has set up a veterans' relief unit in Miami called the war service unit, composed of competent men in veterans' affairs. This is to help veterans and their families.

"Gov. Sholtz has issued a proclamation designating the American Red Cross as the official relief agency.

"Official count of the Red Cross at 4 p. m. this afternoon is 256 known dead, of whom 200 were World War veterans—252 injured, of whom 25 per cent were seriously injured.

Radio Estimate Is 700.

"The Red Cross reached hundreds of small islands along the Florida coast today where fishermen and their families were isolated, delivering to them ample supplies of foodstuffs and clothing material."

A report to Pan-American Airways from Wray Gillette, operator of its emergency short-wave radio set in the storm-stricken keys, said late today it was believed the total deaths in the region would reach 700.

Relief forces, meanwhile, were marshaled to aid the affected sections, spurred by direct orders from President Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y., for all agencies of the Government to lend their assistance.

The President also directed immediate aids to investigate why adequate precautions apparently were not taken to protect from the approaching storm the hundreds of World War veterans at three camps in the keys engaged in a FERA highway building project.

Hopkins Denies Error by FERA Cost Gale Toll

Faces Severe Criticism for Failure to Move Men From Camps.

By Felix Bruner.

Facing severe criticism of his organization because veterans on work relief were not removed from the Florida keys before the hurricane broke, Harry L. Hopkins, FERA administrator, yesterday blamed weather reports for failure of his subordinates in Florida to act.

The Red Cross estimated that 200 war veterans, engaged on a road construction project, were killed. Altogether about 700 men, housed in three camps, were in the storm area.

From Hyde Park, the Associated Press reported that President Roosevelt had asked that reports that adequate precautions had not been taken to save the lives of the veterans be investigated.

"Our information from Weather Bureau reports is that the storm was jumping all around there and nobody could tell where it would hit," Hopkins said. "Wherever we had a camp, at Key West or anywhere else, had the storm hit it, it would have been wrecked.

Describing the deaths of the veterans as a "terrible and shocking disaster," Hopkins said that he did not believe that anyone could be accused of negligence for failure to evacuate the camps.

"I don't think anyone reading the weather reports—and I have been reading them—would necessarily have evacuated those people," he said.

A train which started for the camps after the storm broke was blown from the tracks and wrecked. Hopkins said he did not know whether it had been sent by the FERA or by the Florida National Guard.

Treasury's Report Discloses New Deal Within '35 Budget

By the Associated Press.

At President Roosevelt's direction, Treasury officials were busy yesterday preparing an up-to-the-minute version of governmental finances.

Modernization of the January budget in the light of appropriations and new taxes voted by Congress was the objective.

The work was pressed as Secretary Morgenthau, studying figures for the first two months of the fiscal year, observed they were "within the President's budget," as submitted in January, and included $245,000,000 of "recoverable" loans.

"The more you go into it for the first two months, the better it looks," he commented, but declined to say whether he thought the Government would stay within the estimates for the full year.

The new edition of the budget was contemplated by the President when he sent his original figures to Congress in January. It was planned to include, he said, revised estimates of tax collections as effected by both business changes and tax legislation the total of appropriations made by Congress.

Officials and bookkeepers of the Budget Bureau plan to have the new budget ready for publication in about a fortnight.

Figures for July and August, the first two months of the 1936 fiscal year, showed total expenditures of $1,249,000,000, receipts of $577,000,000, a deficit of $672,000,000 and an increase of $331,000,000 in the national debt.

Morgenthau called attention to the lending activities of various agencies—$188,000,000 loaned to the Commodity Credit Corporation and an almost equivalent amount advanced to the Reconstruction Corporation for a total of $376,000,000. At the same time, he said the PWA received repayments of $131,000,000

Justice Crater Still Mystery, Says Actress, in Divorce Suit

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 5.—A divorce suit charge that Jayne Manners, actress, asserted she "knew plenty" about the unsolved disappearance of Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater, of New York, was made today by her husband, Maurice L. Kusell, and promptly denied by the blonde show girl.

Miss Manners, sometimes called June Manners, said she did not recall having met Justice Crater, but had been told she did meet him at a New York dinner party.

"I have never been officially questioned by authorities concerning the disappearance," she said. "But should I ever be notified officially that officers want to question me, I am willing and ready at all times to answer any questions because I have a clear conscience."

Kusell, a dance director, filed a complaint asserting his wife had told him she was one of the women who figured in Crater's life and that what she knew about his disappearance five years ago "would blow up the entire affair."

"The disappearance is as much of a mystery to me as it is to the entire world," said the actress in an interview

Detective Joseph von Weisenstein, chief police investigator in the mystery, said he "never heard of a Jayne or June Manners" in his questioning of scores of Crater's friends.

"There were at least a half dozen show girls who claimed friendship with Crater at the time he dropped from sight," said Von Weisenstein. "I interviewed them atll and remember them well. I never heard of the Manners girl."

In one of the most baffling cases on record, Justice Crater, 6-foot politician, family man and writer jumped up and went over to Eden, whispering vigorously.

Jeze spoke with extreme force in responding to Italy's indignant charges against Ethiopia.

"The council should examine whether this indignation is sincere or whether it hides sinister design," the Ethiopian representative said.

"If Italy's aims are legitimate, why has not Italy submitted the case to the League?" the legal expert asked. (The case is before the League on Ethiopia's request).

Jeze asserted that Ethiopia has invoked article 15 of the Covenant and asked the Council to assume full responsibility. "Ethiopia's very existence is menaced by Italy," he said.

After Jeze's speech Rocco re-entered the chamber and asked Laval to suspend the session to allow examination of Jeze's speech. Laval declined, with a gesture which to the galleries appeared almost brusque.

However, the Council adjourned at 8:20 p. m. for the day, its second day's effort to deal with the Italo-Ethiopian question again dominated by Italy's refusal to accept Ethiopia as an equal.

The original conciliation commission make-up, submitted to Aloisi after a meeting of Eden, Laval and the League secretariat, was Britain, France, Poland, Spain and Turkey. However, Aloisi refused to tolerate membership of Britain and France.

Council Urged to Act.

The commission would not be drawn under any specific article of the League Covenant, although if unsuccessful it might report to the Council with recommendations.

Jeze, in his speech today, particularly called attention of the Council to articles 10 and 15. The tenth article undertakes to guarantee the territorial integrity of any member against aggression. The fifteenth provides that members shall submit to arbitration quarrels likely to lead to ruptures. If arbitration is refused or fails, the Council may issue a declaration regarding the dispute and recommendations of the Council. Jeze particularly stressed this last provision.

Jeze quoted the late Calvin Coolidge: "The action of war anywhere does harm to the interests of my own country."

"Do not refuse Ethiopia the effective co-operation promised her in the Covenant," Jeze pleaded. "Italy is threatening her very existence.

"Ethiopia does not wish to delay by one day or by one hour this Council's work."

Confidence in League.

In a dramatic conclusion, the famous lawyer rested his case with the statement:

"Ethiopian scorn of death is known around the world—but she has unbounded confidence in the League of Nations."

Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar, forcefully insisted that the Council must intervene in accordance with the covenant.

"Although the dispute does not directly affect Russia, yete the issue affects the cause of peace in general and sooner or later every country," Litvinoff said.

Italy, in asking the Council to remain indifferent, he asserted, "invited the members to repudiate their own international obligations."

"We are faced with the direct threat of impending military operations between two members of the League. Can we ignore this fact and forget the existence of Articles 10 and 15 of the covenant?"

The Council adjourned after Litvinoff's speech, partly as result of Italy's stand and partly to consider its own dilemma.

An Italian spokesman explained tonight that "the question of Italy's withdraway from Geneva" will not in any way arise until Jeze's speech is examined completely.

Baron Aloisi immediately telephoned Mussolini after Jeze made his blunt opening declaration.

Lack of Bonus Marches Explained By Storm Toll of Veterans; G. O. P. Seeks Funds.

By Raymond Clapper

THOSE who have wondered why we have had no bonus marches and demonstrations at Washington during this Administration found the answer tucked away in the hurricane news from Florida.

For more than two years it has been the policy to spirit gathering veterans out of Washington and into concentration camps far away from the Capital's spotlight. About a dozen veterans' camps have been maintained, five in Florida and the others in various Southern States where winters are mild. Whenever a group gathered at the transient camp at Washington, Veterans Bureau officials went among them, offered them free transportation, $30 a month and keep in Florida. Veterans either accepted the offer or vanished to seek transient relief elsewhere.

* * * *

Seven hundred of these bonus marchers were in the three Florida veteran camps, which were struck by the hurricane. Controversy and an Administration investigation have begun to ascertain whether there was negligence in not evacuating these veterans when the first hurricane warnings were issued.

The Weather Bureau says ample warning was given. Federal relief officials say not. Sunday night Florida weather stations broadcast warning of the possibility of a hurricane. Monday afternoon a relief train started from Miami for the veteran camps further down on the Florida keys. It ran into the hurricane and was blown off the track. One question unanswered here is whether the Flofida highway authorities, for whom the veterans were working, could not have run the men out in trucks?

No matter whose fault it was, if anyone's, officials are pretty sick about it. They had regarded their disposition of the bonus marchers as about perfect.

All kinds of deductions may be drawn from the call by Republican National Chairman Fletcher for a meeting of the Republican National Executive Committee September 25, but the main purpose is to expand committees activities and find the money for it. Republican candidates and major party reorganization are not involved. It is to be a board of directors meeting to consider additional publicity, radio, and field activities such as the staffing of the new mid-west headquarters to be set up in Chicago, within gunshot of the pivotal farm belt. In short, the idea is to intensify the general attack on the Administration and recondition the organization so that it will be ready to go when the party gets a candidate. Chairman Fletcher is not resigning.

The British destroyed Restless and four paddle steamers quickly reached the side of the Whippingham when the vessel, lacking a wireless, signaled by flag for help 6 miles west of the Needles, near Portsmouth.

Squalls Imperil Steamer.

The Whippingham, carrying passengers between the important South England cities of Portsmouth and Bournemouth, got into trouble during heavy rains and squalls. Even after she was heading back to Portsmouth under tow of another rescue ship, the steamer South Sea, was sent out to accompany her.

Although the lives of all the many passengers of these two larger ships were successfully protected, two British fishermen drowned in the collision of fishing vessels off the mouth of the Tyne. One vessel sank and seven other fishermen were rescued.

A wireless message from the Formigny, the other vessel involved in the collision off Portugal, said she was making her way under her own power toward Lisbon.

Passengers Are Calm.

Transfer of passengers from the Doric, of the Cunard-White Star Line, apparently was only a precautionary measure and she immediately canceled her S O S after the collision and refused immediate aid.

A number of passengers of the Doric experienced their second collision at sea within 20 days—they had previously been taken from the Laurentic, which collided August 16 with the Napier Star. These passengers had been given the privilege of resuming their holiday cruise started on the Laurentic aboard the Doric.

Miss Marguerite Miller, of London, one of the passengers rescued from the Doric, said: "There was no panic whatever. We were given time to get breakfast, to dress and to pack small suitcases. The ship's band played and the passengers sang songs before taking to the boats. Nobody was injured. The Doric was badly damaged and had a severe starboard list."

The approach of the diminishing hurricane began to make itself felt in Virginia, however, late yesterday.

In Farmville, Mrs. Preston Simanski was killed and her son and daughter-in-law injured when their home was struck by violent winds, which swept the area with tornado proportions.

The house was torn to pieces and the woman's body blown more than 50 feet.

A portion of the Southside Hospital in Farmville was unroofed, and the tin roof was torn from the Administration Building of Hampden-Sydney College, 7 miles to the south.

From Danville came reports of high winds sweeping a narrow path through the farm country, leveling buildings in its wake. Three persons were injured when they were struck by flying debris.

At Fredericksburg, the Rappahannock River and small streams were reported rising steadily.

of mystery stories, disappeared August 6, 1930.

Miss Manners said she was working in a J. J. Shubert production in New York at the time and she and her mother sailed for England "on or about the 10th of August." She said they stayed only a few days and on their return Shubert asked her what she knew about the disappearance of Justice Crater.

"I said, 'What do you mean?—I never even met Justice Crater.' He said, 'Why, of course, you did. You met him at a supper party in my apartment, just a short time before you sailed for England.'

"I didn't even remember having met Justice Crater. However, all sorts of wild rumors seem to have been circulated about me and him. For instance, one person told me they heard Justice Crater had sailed for England on the same boat that my mother and I sailed on, but if he did I never saw him on board or at any other time.

Admits Being Questioned.

"I married Mr. Kusell in New York last September when I was appearing at the Paradise Club. Shortly after I married him he came to my dressing room one night and said some reporters were outside and wanted to know whether I was the June Manners who had been questioned in connection with the disappearance of Justice Crater. I told him I was the same girl."

This episode was mentioned by Kusell in his divorce complaint.

Miss Manners recently won a court order setting aside the interlocutory decree of divorce Kusell won last June, when he charged she had stabbed him with a butcher knife in a quarrel. His references to the Crater case were made in an amended complaint seeking another decree.

department would take custody of all papers and books relating to two Morgan Co. accounts.

These were "the British government treasury account" and "Compte de l'Agence Commerciale du Gouvernment Francais." They covered business carried on for the two governments between the outbreak of the World War and the time this Nation entered it.

A statement from Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, chairman of the Munitions Committee, by telephone from Chicago yesterday said:

"The arrangement whereby the Secretary of State received into his custody documents from the files of J. P. Morgan & Co. relating to the commercial accounts of the British and French governments during the years 1914 to 1917 was made after consultation with the special committee of the Senate investigating the munitions industry, and with the entire approval of the committee.

"Mr. Hull has made these documents available to the investigators of the committee on the same generous terms on which he has made available to them documents from the files of the Department of State."

Used in January.

Nye said several days ago that the information gained by his investigators in their study of the Morgan records would be used when the committee resumes its hearings in January.

Persons familiar with diplomatic procedure said there was nothing unusual in the British and French protest.

It was said to be in conformance with ordinary diplomatic customs, under which any government would insist upon the immunity of its officials or property from seizure.

256 Are Dead In Hurricane; Probe Ordered

yet to be brought in, totaled 140. So far, however, only 57 bodies had been brought to Miami mortuaries.

Three of the bodies here were those of women, two small girls, one a small boy and 51 were those of men. Not more than 10 had been even tentatively identified.

Late in the day Charles C. Clark, acting chief of the Weather Bureau at Washington, said that "from our advisories and forecasts, apparently ample notice was given of the danger and approach of this hurricane."

Gillette in his report to Pan-American Airways said:

"From way bodies being brought in and best reports available, believe dead will total 700. Five hundred coffins already ordered."

Cremation Is Suggested.

While the storm rapidly was diminishing in intensity as it crossed southeastern Georgia and headed for the Atlantic, cremation of the bodies of the victims was suggested by some rescue expeditions as work of removing the torn and battered bodies became increasingly difficult, because of flooded, congested highways and warm weather.

Scores of bodies of victims were cremated or buried in shallow, hastily dug graves by rescue workers following the great hurricane disaster of 1928 that struck the Palm Beach and Lake Okeechobee region in the vast everglades and claimed hundreds of lives.

At that time, bodies too badly decomposed by the time relief workers found them to be picked up, were either saturated with oil and burned or rolled into soggy, muck graves.

When asked whether cremation might be resorted to for victims of the present storm, disaster relief Chairman Thompson said: "That's a matter for the Government to decide."

The President's orders called for arrangements for transportation of the bodies where the next of kin nerals and burial in Arlington Nadesired, and indicated military futional Cemetery at Washington.

Roosevelt Orders Aid.

In calling for investigations in the hrricane-stricken Keys, President Roosevelt indicated he wanted to see that the injured veterans are promptly hospitalized; that caskets are provided for the dead veterans and their bodies transported for burial; that the survivors are rehabilitated and that a study be made as to why the veterans were not rescued in time and why adequate precautions were not taken.

The Chief Executive called upon Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, and Harry L. Hopkins, works relief administrator, to name assistants to do the work outlined. Col. George E. Ijams, assistant to Hines, was named to handle the relief and investigation tasks, and Aubrey Williams, assistant to Hopkins, was selected to make the inquiry into the veterans' camp disaster.

Evacuation of all injured, homeless and destitute from the storm-stricken Keys continued at a slow pace last night as flooded, congested and washed-out highways hampered removal operations.

Bodies Still Hang in Trees.

Most of those living and dead still on the isoltaed Keys were brought to the nearest point of transportation by boat over seas still rough from the raging storm.

Henry Redkey, director of the Emergency Relief Administration transient division, said all of the veterans who are able to make the trip would be taken to Jacksonville last night on a special train, and quartered at Camp Foster. He said the FERA had made a special grant of $25,000 to take care of the injured men.

Pitiful tales of horror and desolation continued to come out of the devastated and flooded area by those who survived the fury of the storm and were reached by rescue workers.

In some places, bodies still hung grotesquely to trees, three days after the storm struck. Others were buried or half-buried in muck and mangroves—some in such condition as to make removal difficult.

Conditions Are "Fearful."

Conditions throughout the affected area still were described as "fearful" by those who went, saw and returned. Bodies floated about in the debris. No one seemed able to do much about it. Some thought of dynamiting the waters to recover bodies believed lying in it.

Everywhere, survivors walked about in a dazed condition, gaunt and ragged. Many had seen the lives of relatives or friends crushed out before their eyes, or seen their struggling forms carried out to sea by the raging waters which swept over the jagged keys by the storm's fury.

Grimy, bearded and shaken, some of the veterans sought to get their minds off their experiences, while waiting to be evacuated, by digging in the sand with sticks for bottles of beer that had been covered up by the storm.

When a bottle of beer was found, the men would sit down and drink it. It was hot, but they liked it.

Toll Set at 270 to 300.

Here and there, survivors wandered about, singly and in groups, waiting for rescue workers to come and take them to the Florida mainland for food, shelter, clean clothes and hospitalization.

Some huddled in the mud at the foot of a railroad trestle. Others limped along over jagged roads on feet swollen and bruised. Some had great gashes on their heads and bodies—wounds that had not yet been treated.

A number waded waist-deep through water to reach concentration points where little groups were being evacuated by boat. Most of the boats were little "outboards" and the removal of survivors was slow.

Reports made by Red Cross Chairman Thompson said 156 bodies already have been taken out of the storm area. He still stuck by his estimate that the death toll would be "between 270 and 300."

Governor Visits Miami.

The Red Cross chairman said his organization was based just above Snake Creek, where the overseas highway was broken by the storm, but that its communication headquarters was at Tavernier, six miles farther south. Two telephone lines to the outside world have been set up, he said.

Off to make a survey of the devastated area, Gov. Dave Sholtz left the capital at Tallahassee yesterday by automobile for Miami. He said he personally wanted to acquaint himself with conditions.

From Coast Guard Cutter No. 244 came reports that all injured persons from both the upper and lower Matecumbe Keys were being ferried to Snake Creek for transportation by automobile to Miami.

National guardsmen and medical aid have reached many of the surviving storm sufferers and are giving emergency treatment on the spot.

Guard Collects Bodies.

The cutter's radio message said that bodies of the victims were being collected, but it did not say how many had been recovered. Some of the Coast Guard boats are acting as floating hospitals for the injured. Eighteen boats and more than 500 men have been put into the storm area by the Coast Guard.

From S. B. MacReady, district sanitary officer for the State board of health, came word that the work of caring for the survivors in the Keys was "pretty well in hand."

Passengers Rescued From Dixie Smile on Reaching Port

Seemingly in the best of spirits despite their nerve-wrecking experience on the grounded liner Dixie, these passengers smiled as they reached Miami yesterday on the S. S. El Mundo.

in excess of new loans, leaving a net of $245,000,000 in recoverable loans for the two months.

The President's January budget estimates forecast a deficit of $4,869,000,000 for the entire fiscal year. On that basis, a two-month average deficit would approximate $800,000,000 by contrast with the $672,000,000 actually recorded.

By the same computation, receipts were $577,000,000 as compared with estimates of $685,000,000. Expenditures were $1,249,000,000, as compared with an estimated $1,420,000,000.

Officials suggested that receipts fell below such an estimate because neither of the months involved included a regular quarterly installment date for the payment of income tax. September, they predicted, would produce a three-month total rising to expectations.

see a foot ahead. I have been in hurricanes before, in 1915, 1919, 1926 and 1932, but never in one as bad as this."

The succor of the broken liner and its 231 passengers and 122 crew adds a bright page to the history of the American Merchant Marine and the men of the merchant fleet.

At least 15 vessels, including the always present Coast Guard, aided in the dangerous rescue work amid the treacherous coral shoals.

Not a life was lost as life boat crews carried their human freight to safety through shark infested waters still heaving from the devastating hurricane.

Stories of praise and heroism for the master and crew of the Dixie were told by the liner's passengers as they were landed.

Survival Termed Miracle.

From their accounts was pieced together a picture of unflinching courage among both passengers and crew, a calm expectancy of death when the hurricane was at its worst, of singing and joking as six inches of water washed back and forth through the liner's public rooms, of quiet command by ship's officers, rigid obedience by the crew.

"If we could only have felt as calm as the Dixie crew acted, everything would have been fine," said Mrs. J. G. Fisher, of New Orleans.

"The terrible experiences of the night at sea have been now obliterated by the wonderful heroism of the crew," asserted Mrs. Lyda L. Sturr, of Newark, N. J.

"There was no hysteria. We all sang," said Miss Florence E. Steller, of San Francisco.

John Laycock, of Baton Rouge, La., described the survival of passengers in the midst of the howling storm and mountainous waves as a "miracle."

"Waves that must have been 40 feet high and driven with terrific force, splashed over the whole ship, even the bridge," he said. "But all of the passengers and all of the crew are safe—by some miracle."

Officials of the Morgan Line chartered a special train to carry all the passengers to New York and their homes.

Tomorrow, a board of steamship inspectors is to go aboard the Dixie for an investigation of its grounding. At that time Capt. Sundstrom is expected to make his official report.

The last of the rescue fleet steamed away from the Dixie late today. The Dixie's master dismissed the Coast Guard cutters Saukee and Pandora, but the divisional commander at Jacksonville ordered the cutters back to the scene after they discharged the last of the rescued and their personal baggage at Miami in the afternoon.

The last group of passengers was landed at Miami by the Coast Guard cutters Saukee, Pandora and Carrabassett and the Morgan liner El Occidente. It was the second trip to the wrecked Dixie for them, as they had assisted last night in bringing off the first group of rescued.

The baggage of passengers was placed aboard the El Occidente, and her skipper wirelessed Morgan Line offices it and passengers were "all in good condition."

An Associated Press representative, flying again today over the Dixie, reported that the liner was visibly battered, leaning to starboard on the reef which holds it fast.

While the sea was comparatively calm, the heavy Atlantic swell rolled endlessly along her proud sides, burying her more and more deeply in the shifting sands of the reef.

Shipping men say the Dixie will never float again.

Representatives of Merrit, Chapman & Scott, the salvage firm which successfully maneuvered the burned hulk of the Morro Castle from its sand bed on the Jersey beach, boarded the liner from the tug Warbler and undertook the job of estimating salvage possibilities.

Coast Guard Lauded.

The indefatigable efforts of the Coast Guard in aiding the stricken Dixie drew praise today from Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury, under whose supervision is the Coast Guard in the governmental department arrangements.

"Secretary Morgenthau," stated a message received from headquarters, "has followed with keen personal interest and is keeping in close touch with the Coast Guard's Florida rescue and assistance operations, and extends compliments for the good work in the Dixie and other rescue operations."

The Coast Guard sutters Saukee, Carrabassett and Pandora, and the Coast Guard picket boats 2284 and 185 were constantly on the job.

Other vessels which bucked hurricane, rain and ran the danger of hidden reefs to stand by the Dixie were the United Fruit liners Tanamo, San Benito and Eetenas; the Morgan liners El Occidente, El Mundo, El Estero and El Capitan; the tanker Reaper (which fought all Monday night to find the Dixie at the height of the hurricane), and the steamer Platano.

Hopkins Scores Weather Report In Storm Deaths

President Orders Inquiry Into Facts Concerning FERA Fatalties.

FERA to act to save the veterans' lives came from the Miami Chamber of Commerce, Arthur R. Boring, Florida commander of the American Legion, and Representative J. Hardin Peterson, of Florida. Peterson said he will ask for an investigation.

Charles C. Clark, acting chief of the Weather Bureau, was quick to respond to criticisms with the statement that "fro mour advisories and forecasts, apparently ample notice was given of the danger and approach of this hurricane."

Clark said full reports were received from all ships in the area, but that it was dimcult to receive reports from the center of the storm because ships were navigating around it.

Roosevelt Takes Hand.

President Roosevelt personally directed relief activities. He was in touch with Hopkins and other Washington officials by telephone, instructing them to use every means at their disposal for relief.

Hopkins sent Aubrey Williams, assistant FERA administrator, to represent him in Florida. Williams left immediately from Greensboro, S. C., where he received his instructions by telephone.

Hopkins also authorized Gov. Sholtz of Florida to spend any Government funds he believes necessary in the relief work. He also informed the Vetrans' Administration that the FERA was ready to augment the $100 alowed for sending each veteran's body to his home for burial.

Cremation Is Proposed.

Arangements for disposing of the bodies have not been completed. One suggestion was that they be buried in Arlington, another that they be cremated at the scene of the disaster. This was urged by some officials on the scene as a matter of necessity.

Meanwhile, the Veterans' Administration and other official agencies were faced with the problem of identifying the dead. Many of the records pertaining to the men in camp were at the scene of the disaster. Most of the men were veterans who cam to Washington in a bonus march and were shipped to the Florida camps. There are a number of such camps outside the storm area.

The War Department announced that Samuel C. Sacco and Oliver H. P. Clark, fingerprint experts, would leave at once for Florida. Lists of veterans in thecamps were supplied by the Veterans' Administration and their cards were removed from the War Department files and sent to Florida. All men who served in the World War were fingerprinted. The files are still intact.

Red Cross Funds Ample.

Under instruction from President Roosevelt, to whom complaints of failure to evacuate the camps were sent, not only the FERA and Veterans' Bureau but the Red Cross, the Coast Guard, the Army, the Navy and the Farm Credit Administration were redoubling their efforts.

Twenty trained Red Cross relief workers were sent from Washington with ample funds. At Red Cross headquarters it was said that no limitation had been put on needed expenditures. The Red cross is helping relatives recover bodies, supplying food, clothing and shelter, and answering thousands of inquiries.

Despite the quiet building up of the Mediterranean fifleet, Britain appears hopelessly outnumbered by the Italian fleet in the Mediterranean as well as by serviceable aircraft in that vicinity, informed sources asserted.

Meeting with Baldwin were Ramsay MacDonald, lord president of the council Sir Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade; Viscount Halifax, secretary of war; Sir Bolton Eyresmonsell, first lord of the admiralty; W. There appeared no likelihood of a full cabinet meeting until the Geneva situation is further clarified. Informed sources expressed belief this might be a fortnight or more hence.

Essential ministers needed for the defense committee, however, are remaining in London or close by for conferences with Baldwin, who has given up his vacation to watch developments.

Sharp Slump Follows Large Holiday Trade

"Romeo and Juliet" Canceled; Notes on Eleanor Holm and Others.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Gerald G. Gross,

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

The rain is turning into a boomerang to plague managers of downtown movie and vaudeville houses. A hasty poll last night disclosed that the only one who is doing any chortling is Hardie Meakin, RKO-Keith's commandant. But he's the only one fortified by Fred Astaire's feet, Ginger Rogers' ditto and also voice, and Irving Berlin's music.

It all starts out quite happily. Labor Day is on the way and local movie moguls see big business ahead.

"Thousands to Visit Washington Over Labor Day," is the headline theme.

The managers lick their chops, lay in a grand supply of tickets, wipe off the "SRO" sign and sit back to await the rush.

Apres Moi le Deluge.

With Sunday comes rain, but this only sends week-end show business off to a glorious start. Why? Because the thousands of visitors can do little more, besides calling on the relations, than go to the theater. The same alternative faces the locals who are looking for divertisement.

Labor Day, which fell on Monday this year, comes along in due course and it is still raining and the showmen are still chuckling. "Top Hat," at Keith's, breaks a 24-hour-old house record, Greta Garbo has hold-outs at the Palace, the Earle and Fox are packing 'em in—all seven first-run houses are in the money, most of them playing capacity all day.

"Good old rain," the respective impresarios sigh.

(Really. This is no theory but the findings of last night's poll.)

Tuesday and it is still raining. There is a slump. But th- weather is absolved for any freshman in the amusement game knows that receipts dwindle sharply after a holiday, whether the new day brings rain, sunshine or a box of homemade fudge from Aunt Becky.

Bitter With the Sweet.

"Ho hum. Tomorrow's another day."

Tomorrow comes, only now it is called today and, in this instance, it shall hereafter be designated as yesterday. Yesterday (are you following?) also is disguised as a Pago Pago sequence and now the boomerang is abouting face for the return trip.

The holiday visitors are gone, the home folks don't have a mind to tackle a boxoffice when it means a downing. The Fox, in the wake of the biggest Labor Day week-end since Loew's took it over, slumps. The Earle, coming off an exciting Sunday and Monday, slumps. The Belasco, after playing to heartening houses come to attend its reopening, slumps. The Columbia, proud of its most profitable Labor Day since 1931, slumps.

It's the same story all over, with the exception of Keith's, which most of yesterday offered Mr. Astaire's "Top Hat" to capacity audiences.

The weatherman's forecast for today is "rain."

"A joke's a joke, Jupe, enough is enough."

Our London agent remits the information that Noel Coward has written himself a batch of new plays, that Edna Best's leading man in a new Frederick Lonsdale piece being groomed for rehearsal will be Lawrence Olivier, and that the producers have finished casting for "Short Story," of which Sybil Thorndike is co-author. Who remembers when Herbert Marshall was Edna Best's leading man, in the kitchen as well as on the stage?

"Wherefore Art Thou, Romeo?"

The two-letter word beginning with an "i" and ending with "f" cast its curse again last night on "Romeo and Juliet"—as though the Montagues and Capulets don't have enough troubles of their own—and so the Barfield Players' production of this tragedy by William Shakespeare is hereby canceled.

Or, more in the native tongue, the many-times postponed "Romeo and Juliet," which was to have been acted last night in the Monument Grounds' Sylvan Theater if it didn't rain, was called off. It rained.

Tickets purchased in advance will be honored at "Patience," the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta which the Community Players are planning to present in Central High School auditorium Monday night—if the roof does not leak.

Originally "Patience" was to have gone into the If Theater, also known as the Sylvan, but four days of rain and a seasonal chill have just about convinced the sponsors they should take their show indoors.

About Eleanor Holm.

Comes to Loew's Fox as a singer, but will begin practicing for her third Olympics in the Venetian pool at the Hotel Shoreham . . . is said to have a very pleasing voice . . . makes one remember, however dimly, Annette Kellerman and Odiva . . . has been Art Jarrett's bride two years . . . recalls that Helene Madison, another who has no respect for swimming records, is studying to become a nurse . . . is proud of the husband, who can play the guitar, banjo and trombone, as well as croon.

Say It With Music.

Ted Weems, who brings his band to the Earle tomorrow, favors the unusual. One day, while arranging a unique dance presentation, he came upon a certain passage in the music that could best be emphasized by a tone-quality not available with the instruments his orchestra possessed.

"Guess I'll have to invent the horn I want," he mused. A few days later Ted appeared with a queer-looking gadget remotely resembling an English horn and a bagpipe, without the bag. Handing it to Art, brother and trumpet player, he said:

"Here's the horn that'll play the tone I want."

It did. They call it the "Weems-a-phone."

Phil Lampkin's contribution from the orchestra pit on next week's program at Loew's Fox will be another "3-in-1" overture comparable to the one he introduced last month.

He will open with "Avalon," popularized by Al Jolson about a decade and a half ago; swing into "Sylvia" and conclude with a medley concocted from "Manhattan Serenade," "I'm in the Mood for Love," and "Faust."

Mr. Lampkin says his arrangement of "Avalon" is the most modern ever attempted in any American theater. Al Manning will make his debut as a Fox Orchestra harpist with a "Sylvia" solo and Lew Davies, the newly enrolled "singing musician," will do a tenor solo in the course of the third movement.

New Belasco Film.

"My Heart Is Calling," the Gaumont-British production which supplants "Loves of a Dictator" at the Belasco Saturday, will be screened at the Fox Exchange this afternoon for the convenience of critics.

Labeled in G-B quarters as the Polish Caruso, the lover divine and the greatest singer in the world, Kiepura is, nevertheless, a capable actor with a cracker-jack tenor voice, trusting to what we can remember of "Be Mine Tonight" of "Love Me Tonight"—or whatever it was called—the last word was "Tonight," of that we are sure—when it played the Rialto many months ago.

Marta Eggerth has just arrived in the United States from Europe, an American movie contract in her hand and a smile across her blonde complexion.

The evening mail brings, not another Skowhegan, Me., postcard from a Sally Rand fan, but a handsome brochure presented by RKO-Radio to acquaint the public with the virtues of "The Three Musketeers." It must have cost a pretty penny to put out in quantity. The front cover has a reproduction of the musketeers' fancy swords. On the back is the Queen's diamond brooch, honored thus because it helps the plot along. Between the covers are scenes from the picture, all suitably captioned. We like the one: "D'Artagnan's fierce attack against his country's most powerful enemy is stopped only by the entrance of the Quen (sic)." Wonder where the Ken was.

Amateurs and Semipros.

Robert D'Orsey and David Gatlin Pritchard were replaced by Harry Schonrank and Ethel Hayden in the cast of "East Lynne" last night. Young David had to drop out of the melodrama, which is being revived in the National Press Club auditorium, because it's almost time to return to school.

Two casts for coming productions of the Pierce Hall Players will be selected tonight at open tryouts in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest. All interested in amateur theatricals are invited to attend. The time is 8 p. m. George Farrington, chairman of the players' council, will announce plans for the 1935-36 season.

Constance Connor Brown, director of the Studio of Theater Arts, announces that registration for the second winter term will open on October 1. Classes will begin about October 15 at 1731 K street northwest. It is planned to present several plays next winter and spring in connection with the school work.

Sidney Lust will be chairman of the program committee for the Variety Club banquet, same as he was last year. When announcement of committee appointments was sent out to drama desks Tuesday his name was accidentally omitted.

Apple Mary — By Martha Orr

HELLO, DENNIE. IS YOUR GRANDMOTHER AT HOME?
HM-MM, I DON'T THINK SHE WANTS TO SEE YOU, MR. CRAFTEE.
WHO IS IT, DENNIE? OH, IT'S YOU. IF YOU CAME TO FIND OUT WHERE MR. SPROCKETT IS, I DON'T KNOW. WOULDN'T TELL YOU IF I DID.
IT WILL BE TO YOUR ADVANTAGE TO BE FRIENDLY WITH ME, MARY. I THINK YOU DO KNOW WHERE HE IS.
WELL, I DON'T, SO GOOD DAY.
HA, MARY, YOU WOULDN'T BE SO HIGH HANDED IF YOU KNEW I HAVE THE WIRE BILL SENT TO YOU, SAYING HE CAUGHT SPROCKETT. I JUST WANTED TO MAKE SURE YOU DIDN'T KNOW. NOW, TO LAY THE TRAP.

Weems and Jarrett Will Be Band Rivals; Rialto to Open Monday.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

"Accent on Youth" and a diversified vaudeville bill headed by Ted Weems and his orchestra are the attractions held out by the Earle for the week beginning tomorrow. The screen feature, Paramount's version of Samuel Raphaelson's Broadway comedy hit, stars Sylvia Sidney and Herbert Marshall. The latter is cast in the role of a middle-aged playwright, Miss Sidney as his young secretary. Ted Weems will present his brother, Art; "Red" Ingle, barytone soloist; Elmo Tanner, the whistling troubadour, and the Selbys, dancers. A Universal newsreel and short subjects will complete the program.

• • • • •

Spencer Tracy, Claire Trevor, Henry B. Walthall and Allan Dinehart play the leads in "Dante's Inferno," at Loew's Fox for a week beginning tomorrow. Approximately 2,000 extras and bit players are in the cast of this film spectacle. Art Jarrett and his orchestra, featuring Eleanor Holm, hold top honors in the stage show, which also includes Eddie Rio, former Earl Carroll comedy star; Mann, Dupree and Lee, dancers, and Margot and Libby Robin, mimics. There will be a novel overture by the Fox orchestra, conducted by Phil Lampkin, with Al Manning, harpist, and Lew Davies, singing instrumentalist, as soloists. Also news events and comedy on the screen.

• • • • •

Jan Kiepura and Marta Eggerth, continental favorites who have been seen here before in pictures, are costarred in "My Heart Is Calling," the Belasco's second attraction of the season which opens Saturday. The former appeared in "Be Mine Tonight" and Miss Eggerth more recently in "The Unfinished Symphony." His forte is a robust tenor voice, while the blonde Viennese is said to sing and dance equally well.

• • • • •

Scheduled to reopen next Monday, after several months' inactivity, the Rialto's first presentation will be "Harmony Lane," with Douglass Montgomery, Adrienne Ames and Evelyn Venable. Tom Moore, who is bringing the popular Ninth street house into action again, states that the showing of "Harmony Lane" will be a world premier. "The Southernaires" quartet will sing several of Stephen Foster's famous songs, in keeping with the picture, which was inspired by the life of the composer.

The announcement that "Anna Karenina" is staying for a second week at the Palace will occasion no surprise. One of the finest pictures ever made by Greta Garbo, this filmization of Count Tolstoi's novel also portrays Fredric March, Freddie Bartholomew, Basil Rathbone, Reginald Owen, Phoebe Foster, Reginald Denny and others to advantage. Included among the preliminaries are a Mickey Mouse comedy, newsreel and a novelty subject.

• • • •

Two weeks at the Palace apparently was insufficient to meet the demand, so "China Seas," with Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Wallace Beery, returns to the Columbia for another week beginning tomorrow. This is the first smash hit of the new Metro-Goldwyn season. A newsreel, a comedy and another short subject will supplement the main attraction.

• • • •

"Top Hat" is going into a second week at RKO-Keith's and—risking a frown from Manager Hardie Meakin, who prefers that his patrons don't delay—it is likely to enter a third and a fourth when the time comes 'round. It broke all records at the Fifteenth street house during the Labor Day week-end, setting up a new mark which won't be easy to displace. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers are starred in this, of course, and they receive excellent support from Edward Everett Horton, Helen Broderick, Eric Blore and Erik Rhodes.

• • • •

Martinsburg Gets Airport Deed Soon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 5.—Deed for the ownership of Shepherd Landing Field here is ready to be turned over to the city council, it has been announced by the Berkeley Aviation Club, owners. Under its terms the ownership is to pass to the city upon the assumption of a $3,000 debt and under the stipulation that the field should be operated by a board of governors composed of men selected by the aviation club.

The transferring of the deed has been a bone of contention between the city council and the club since negotiations were opened by the city to purchase the field in order that an appropriation of approximately $40,009 could be obtained from the Works Progress Administration.

Banquet Planned On Antietam Day

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 5.—The seventy-second anniversary of the Battle of Antietam, recorded as the fiercest single day engagement of the Civil War, will be commemorated with a banquet September 17 at Sharpsburg.

Invitations went out today to officials in towns of Maryland and West Virginia. Plans for further popularizing the battlefield will be discussed.

Among those who have been invited are Representative David J. Lewis, Maryland; Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia; Maj. Gen. Milton Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland, and representatives of the National Park Service, which has charge of the battlefield development.

It is the plan of the Hagerstown chamber to make the banquet an annual affair, with a great reunion of surviving veterans of both North and South there on the seventy-fifth anniversary of the battle.

It's a small world, after all.

Francia White was ill not long ago, following the extraction of a wisdom tooth, and one of the neighbors who "dropped in" to her New York apartment to help around, turned out to be Noel Francis, of the movies.

Francia and Noel discovered soon that they had many common interests. To begin with, both were born in Texas. Both studied singing under the same teacher. Both recently had wisdom teeth extracted. And Noel Francis made her debut in "Rio Rita," the role that Francia White sings tonight in the Beauty Box Theater!

Immediately the girls collaborated and the movie star has been coaching Francia in several sequences of "Rio Rita."

Incidentally, Francia sang "Natoma" last Friday, with her jaw swollen the size of a Baldwin apple.

Exceptions to the Rule.

There is an old axiom handed down from Whist to Bridge Whist, from Bridge Whist to Auction and from Auction to Contract—"always return your partner's suit." Generally, this is a good rule, but all generalities being untrue, there are of course exceptions. A little forethought will usually tell you when the exception is more urgent than the rule.

Opportunities for the Deschapelles Coup are rare. In addition, there are so few players to whom the mysteries of this sacrificial play are no mystery that its successful execution is generally spectacular. It was doubly so in today's hand because it was made at the second trick and in defiance of the "return your partner's suit" rule.

1—Support for the majors plus the presence of the intermediate cards makes an opening bid preferable to a pass.

2—If the diamond suit can be brought in, North can count the probability of six tricks in his hand and his three notrump bid is therefore sound.

The Play.

West opened the fourth best spade and declarer allowed East's Jack to hold. Nine hundred and ninety-nine players out of a thousand would have automatically returned a spade. East, however, was a player who thought over the possibilities. The only hope of preventing dummy from winning five diamond tricks appeared to be if South held only two cards in that suit and if North's heart re-entry could be removed. East felt certain that South held a sure spade stopper, probably the Ace; if so, he must hold three cards in that suit, since with K Q 10, West would have opened the King. Even if South did not hold a spade stopper, however, there was plenty of time to develop partner's spades because East himself had all three remaining suits stopped.

He, therefore, returned the King of hearts. The very audacity of this play caused South to slip, since he unthinkingly won this trick with dummy's Ace. If he had ducked, there was at least a chance of making contract. But with dummy's entry gone, East was able to shut out dummy's diamond suit, letting South's Jack win the first trick and making the King on the second round. Now the shift back to partner's spade suit knocked out South's Ace and when East got in with a club, a heart return won by West's Queen allowed that player to take the setting tricks.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Morgan Baker.

BASICALLY, the civil service law rests on the proposition that competition sifts out the best, that experience makes for proficiency and that good service is encouraged by the hope of advancement. That was the keynote of an address by Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, before the National Federation of Federal Employes Convention at Yellowston Park last night.

BAKER.

Significant also in his address was a warning to the N. F. F. E. not to demand too much in its program. Mr. Mitchell said:

"It must be kept in mind that there are two sides to be considered. Organizations such as yours should keep in mind that the interest of the Government is a very vital factor in any matter of employment adjustment. Uncle Sam is not a hard taskmaster, but if he gets the idea that you are asking too much, you may be denied what he otherwise would be ready to grant."

A blow to the proposed civil service court of appeals was seen in his opinion that Congress is not likely to agree to any plan that is strongly opposed by the employing governmental agencies; nor to any plan which sets up an entirely new agency with resultant increased appropriation.

Not Eager for the Task.

Additional cold water was thrown on the whole plan of considering employe complaints in the commission president's statement that the commission is not eager for the "rather thankless job of adjudicator; nor is it urging that it be constituted a court of last resort in these cases."

Mr. Mitchell also called upon the NFFE to consider the Government's side in the question of retirements.

"The consensus of opinion," he said, "of those who study and administer the retirement system is that if compulsory retirement after 30 years' service was adopted, the cost would be increased to such an extent that Congress might become alarmed. It might result in demanding greater contributions from employes, or lowering the benefits.

"Every now and then the proposal comes up that employes be permitted to borrow on the payments they have made into the retirement fund, much as policy holders can borrow from life insurance companies. I believe that permitting such borrowings would be a very serious mistake, and I hope that it will not be favored by your organization."

Fund in Good Condition, He Says.

At this point, Mr. Mitchell again emphasized that the retirement fund is in good condition. However, he admitted that the annual appropriations to the fund have not been as great as the commission has recommended, or as its actuaries said should be made to conform to fund requirements of a private company.

[Congress this year increased the appropriation to $40,000,000, which is more nearly in line with the actuarial recommendation.—Editor's note.]

The growing practice of members of Congress writing letters of recommendation to the commission for their constituent employes or applicants was rapped by the Civil Service chief as "very bad taste."

Right at the source of the charges that the Civil Service has been endangered by New Deal policies, Mr. Mitchell added his denial to that of his colleague, Commissioner McMillin (which appeared in this column yesterday). To the charges, made by Luther C. Steward, NFFE president, the Civil Service president said:

"During the first year of the Roosevelt Administration there was a decrease in the number of Government employes who had secured their positions through competition. That decrease was due to the operations of the economy act. Since that date there has been a gradual increase."

Who is that human with features grim
Who picks up cards and sticks them in Endless drawers indefinitely?

Why, in his eyes, a fanatic gleam
As he scans each card's symbolic scheme
And sorts them out industriously?

A little conversation on names that are nerts—
"Hen, Gag, Crazy Cat, Casebeer, Hurts;"
The humorous touch, though dustily.

Four-thirty finds him, washed and clean
Navigating homeward, full of steam,
The Government file clerk, happily.

In The Cause Of Efficiency.

Decorations have become almost an established routine in the life of Gen. MacArthur, chief of staff of the United States Army.

The bronze Oak Leaf Cluster awarded to him yesterday by the Secretary of War, to be attached to the Distinguished Service Medal conferred upon him during the World War, is in a sense only one of many similar honors that have come to him. He had previously been cited for "remarkable courage" under fire in the trenches of France, for "brilliant skill" in maneuvering his troops at the front, for "indomitable resolution" in rallying broken lines, etc. Nevertheless the award he has just received carries a special tribute from which the chief of staff may properly derive great satisfaction.

Reading the citation, Secretary Dern said in part:

> Douglas MacArthur * * * devised and developed the Four-Army organization of our land forces; he conceived and established the General Headquarters Air Force, thus immeasurably increasing the effectiveness of our air defenses; he initiated a comprehensive program of modernization in the Army's tactics, equipment, training and organization.

It has been the special function of Gen. MacArthur to establish within the Army new standards of efficiency. The fact that there is still much to be done in this direction does not detract from his achievement during the last five years. Through most of that period the Army was granted somewhat meager appropriations. For this fiscal year, however, a most generous increase was made.

The Post inadvertently stated a short time ago that the current War Department appropriation of $401,998,170 did not include non-military expenditures. Actually funds for rivers and harbors, flood control and operation of the Panama Canal are within this total. Even so, the amounts available for purely military purposes are large by any standard of comparison. Consequently, even greater strides toward efficiency in national defense should be attained this year.

In the present spendthrift era there is particular danger that large appropriations will encourage incompetence as well as waste. Those who are familiar with the tireless efforts of Gen. MacArthur to enhance the efficiency of our military forces will hope that his successor may prove no less vigilant in the same cause.

Feeble Economy Gestures.

The latest executive order, bringing the administrative expenditures of seven emergency agencies under the supervision of the Budget Bureau, follows closely upon a series of similar orders covering 13 other organizations.

Heretofore, all these agencies have been disbursing emergency funds which may be spent at the discretion of the President without having to submit their plans for the approval of the Budget Bureau. The recent executive orders, erroneously heralded as inaugurating a new economy program, are in fact merely a tardy effort to apply limited safeguards against reckless spending to agencies which have been entirely free from restrictions applicable to the permanent Government establishments.

In some cases the special work which the emergency organizations were created to discharge is largely finished and the Budget Bureau will have little to do except lock the door when it is too late. The need for expert assistance and checks upon outlays was indeed most imperative when the New Deal agencies were first launched, usually under the guidance of untrained administrators. Taken at this late date, the precautionary action is ironical.

It is noticeable, moreover, that the most important spending agency now in operation—the Works Progress Administration—has not so far been covered by any of the executive orders. Its immunity from supervision will no doubt be excused on the specious ground that speedy results preclude preliminary scrutiny by experts of the Budget Bureau.

Reduction in the personnel of the Government agencies will, in the opinion of President Roosevelt, be facilitated by the proposed supervision of administrative outlays. Of course, the extent of the economies thus achieved will depend upon many factors beyond the control of the Budget Bureau. However, the President's recently announced decision to establish a transfer agency to take care of displaced workers in the unclassified services should accelerate the disbandment of moribund temporary organizations, in addition to providing some protection against a continuous influx of new political appointees.

The steps so far taken to prevent needless waste in disbursing emergency funds are merely belated and restricted attempts to erect safeguards that should have been established from the beginning. The economies obtainable by placing external checks upon administrative expenditures of emergency organizations are necessarily limited in scope. A balanced budget can only be achieved by drastic reductions in the mandatory appropriations voted by Congress—outlays which the Budget Bureau can neither reduce nor withhold from designated spending agencies.

"Full Liberty Of Action."

That Mussolini is by no means as contemptuous of collective action to safeguard the League Covenant as he claims in speeches for domestic consumption is shown by the efforts he is making to avert condemnation by Geneva. The presence of Baron Aloisi at the Council table, bolstered by packing cases filled with documentary evidence of Ethiopian transgressions, further reveals how seriously Italy now takes the mobilized moral opinion of mankind. And it is no insignificant preliminary victory for the League that Italy has been forced not merely to state her case, but to state it in the position of a defendant at the bar of international opinion.

In some respects it is quite a strong case which the Italian representative presented to the council on Wednesday. While the Ethiopian reply is still to come, the charges of human slavery, of barbarous practices, of local anarchy, and more particularly of a policy of discrimination against Italians in Ethiopia, are all probably well-founded. None deny that Ethiopia is a most primitive country, and one which cannot from any viewpoint be regarded as having attained a stage of development comparable to that of Italy. But to demonstrate Italian superiority all along the line is in no way to meet the issue on which world attention is now focused.

That issue was, however, stated by Baron Aloisi when, after stirring correspondents to repressed mirth by saying Italy considers herself "in great danger" from Ethiopia, he insisted upon his country's right to "full liberty of action" in this crisis. It is that thesis, not the desirability of reforming Ethiopia, which is inadmissible. And it is inadmissible because full liberty of action for Mussolini threatens political stability and peace far beyond territories in which he can claim any interest whatsoever.

Austria reserved "full liberty of action" when her archduke was assassinated by Serbian plotters at Sarajevo in 1914. And as a result of Austrian insistence on judging the crime herself, the entire world was shortly in the throes of war. The implications of the present crisis are just as grave. There is no more real assurance than there was in 1914 that New Zealand, China, Brazil and the United States—all belligerents in the last war—may not eventually be drawn into another holocaust, if a single headstrong ruler is allowed to ignite the powder magazine. That is why the world can no longer afford to let any nation, no matter how powerful, lay down the doctrine of complete freedom of action in a field where the interests of all, and the very existence of some, are so intimately concerned.

The League of Nations was set up as a mechanism which should substitute objective collective judgment for individual "liberty of action" in international disputes. Misinterpretation, mistakes, indifference, opposing interests, and vicious hostility, combined with its own numerous shortcomings, have made the League a weak instrumentality on which to lean. But even so the intelligence of mankind can not disagree with the simple statement with which Anthony Eden placed the British position before the council on Wednesday:

"Collapse of the League and the new conception of international order for which it stands would be a world calamity."

A Mark Of Progress.

When medical authorities speak on the subject of public health in Washington the public has come to expect a highly critical tone, coupled with an appeal for funds. In fact, this vital community service has been so neglected in the Capital City that depreciation has become almost traditional in the comments of laymen as well as doctors. It is all the more pleasing, therefore, to note the optimism unloosed at the dedication of the Gallinger Municipal Hospital Annex for victims of contagious diseases.

As was pointed out by Dr. Cumming, United States Surgeon General, this institution marks the evolution of the District's hospital facilities from a status that was "humiliating" to one "of which we can be proud." The new building was acclaimed as one of the world's finest hospital units for the treatment of contagious diseases. In this particular the National Capital has at last taken leadership. That is cause for rejoicing even beyond the boundaries of the District, for the influence of the public health standards set here is not inconsiderable in other parts of the country.

The enthusiasm which this new institution has aroused does not mean, of course, that Washington's public health problems are solved. In reality only initial steps toward that goal have been taken. But these are very significant steps. And the co-operative attitude manifested on the occasion of this dedication suggests that the efforts of public officials and civic workers will not be relaxed until comparable improvements have been made in every branch of Washington's public health service.

Beyond Human Control.

In the wake of the hurricane thousands of individuals and many agencies are rushing to aid the wounded and homeless, to recover and bury the dead. Gov. Scholtz, of Florida, hastened to the devastated area to direct the rescue work. Red Cross officials are doing their utmost to ameliorate the suffering and horror which this rampage of wind and rain left in its path. President Roosevelt has properly ordered an investigation into the delay in evacuating the veterans' camps where the greatest toll of life seems to have been taken. The sympathy of 125,000,000 people goes out to the stricken region. In short, every possible effort to mitigate the desolation of a major catastrophe appears to have been made.

Beyond all this manifestation of human kindness, however, one cannot fail to be impressed by the relentless natural forces that swept hundreds of victims into the jaws of death. Man has made remarkable progress in the conquest of his environment. Yet in the grip of a hurricane, earthquake, cyclone, drought or lesser natural phenomena he is still a helpless creature. In spite of our meteorology, seismology and kindred sciences, the elements continue to strike with blind destructive power that leaves mere human intellect in sober awe. To a greater extent than the average individual cares to realize we are still at the mercy of uncontrollable forces that we do not fully understand.

In Norwich, England, Prof. William W. Watts, eminent geologist, has suggested to the British Association for the Advancement of Science that gravitational forces may be a cause of some violent disturbances that afflict this sphere. The success of astronomers in predicting earthquakes from the conjunctions of cosmic bodies lends credence to the theory. Whether these or other explanations of the earth's occasional savage behavior are finally accepted, the fact remains that all human activity is subject to these seeming whims of nature.

In this scientific age it is important that these imponderables be recognized. There is something deeply ironical about the destruction of a veterans' "rehabilitation" camp established in an area noted for violent storms by an Administration devoted to "planning." The same may be said of the destruction of food just before the drought and of the creation of a rural resettlement agency just before rains made temporary deserts blossom once more. Plans that make no allowance for these unforeseen and often inexplicable actions of nature are obviously too shallow to make much impress upon the growth of a nation.

With our present meager information, the one thing certain about hurricanes and earthquakes is their recurrence. If death and destruction are to be minimized when they strike, the human race must more consistently prepare to guard itself. A flash of foresight, and in many cases simple precautions against almost inevitable contingencies, would be worth more than all the investigations, the relief and the sympathy that a nation can render after the tragedy has occurred.

The Mill On The Floss.

One letter—the first of the alphabet, the indefinite article—brings more grist to the mental hopper than the two paragraphs following it in the New York Times' announcement that a ramshackle building has been razed in the English Midlands. This mill on the Floss, says the brief cable message, gave its name to "a book by George Eliot."

Forty-five years ago, a decade after Mary Ann Evans' death, there lived no cultivated person native to the English tongue who could not have told the plot of that novel and its brothers: "Middlemarch," "Adam Bede," "Felix Holt" and "Silas Marner." Their characters, to millions of readers, were real people, "included," as Douglas Jerrold said Dickens' characters should be, "in the census." A short score of years ago, not to have at least a bowing acquaintance with these books was not to know, or be known by, the inner circle of literary society. Yet today George Eliot is—or, rather, "was"—just "a novelist," and "The Mill on the Floss" has become merely "a novel."

Only to the general reader, however—and perhaps only for the present. To the critic, George Eliot has not lost greatly in stature. She is "dated," as we moderns love to say; she has the deliberate, the Victorian, manner. But, at her best, she addresses herself boldly to the eternities—and this, in the long run, should save her even for that most hurried of all readers, "the general."

During the Gay Nineties, Maggie Tulliver's "thirst after righteousness" moved Leslie Stephen to rhapsody, Henry James to discreet applause. Yet today also, in this Year of Grace 1935, so just a judge as Lord David Cecil can write: "Though not a supreme artist, George Eliot was not a minor one; laboriously, but surely, her insight, her integrity, her sad mature wisdom, lifted her to the region of major art . . . She stands at the gateway between the old novel and the new, a massive caryatid, heavy of countenance, uneasy of attitude, but noble, monumental, profoundly impressive."

Labor And Inventions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It does seem that in the interest of the unemployed one of the things that the National Administration might be empowered to do would be to lend a hand in a reduction of hours of labor where conditions warrant in civilian establishments of the Government and, as far as possible, in the various branches of private industry.

There ought to be some sort of control established and balance maintained between the supply of labor and the supply of mechanical inventions in the former's favor. Unless some attempt is made in this direction, it seems certain that the Nation is going to continue to be burdened with heavy unemployment permanently. Moreover, such control and balance must be sought after as a means of making possible the reduction of expenditures for relief and for obtaining a more widespread and more equitable distribution of wealth.

The former NRA, which the Supreme Court ruled was unconstitutional, sought perhaps too extensive and too widespread a degree of control and balance over industry as a whole. A new NRA, directed, more or less, at the matter of control and balance over the number of labor hours per day in industry (including civilian establishments of the Government) would seem to find more public favor, be fraught with less difficulty of application and present more possibility for good for the public weal. Moreover, it would seem so much in keeping with the declaration of the Federal Constitution about equality and inalienability of the rights of individuals in favor of individual excellence, "to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," that no Supreme Court ruling could ever find it unconstitutional.

While being in favor of rugged individualism, I think the task of making less rugged the inclination of the unemployed and less individualistic the inclination of those of the House of Have in favor of social considerations and the public weal is a duty incumbent upon the National Administration.

Planning For Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is an ill wind that blows no good. Congress was so pushed with weighty business that it left aside the matter of any more new buildings; and it is to be hoped that before the next session citizens and esthetic interests will protest against the danger of congestion.

While the new buildings erected in recent years are beautiful and useful, it is obvious that they are spaced pretty closely. While no great harm may result from this, further building plans ought to provide for wider spaces and for sufficient opportunity for street traffic to take people to and from the buildings.

It is not enough to have a building beautiful or well planned, taken only by itself, but it should fit in with the needs of the city as a whole. There should be parking spaces for all concerned, not only for the high officials. Workmen and clerks have to get to their work also and get away again in the evening. If the street cars do not give sufficient opportunity, people must perforce use automobiles. On the other hand, if this makes too many automobiles, then the streets must be made available for street car traffic in ample abundance to meet the need.

This means that buildings must be so placed that they will not close up streets. And they must be so arranged with reference to the streets that not only local but long through traffic can move in large volume.

Much Ado About Oil.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The general excitement of the statesmen of the world over the concessions Selassie gave to Rickett and the Standard Oil Co. is an amusing commentary upon the present psychology of mankind. Verily, it seems that the whole world has gone crazy. It is evident that our State Department was gravely concerned over the incident. It may be asked in the name of common sense and reason why?

Even though the Standard Oil is a party to the concession, what concern is it to the American people? Could anyone in the United States be so mentally unbalanced as to think for a moment that we would embroil ourselves in the Ethiopian matter on account of the Standard Oil Co.? Moreover, if those in authority think they could raise an expeditionary force to send abroad to fight the battles of Great Britain they are laboring under a great delusion. The last experience is enough for us. We have learned our lesson and learned it well.

The writer is no pacifist, but having participated in the last war, and knowing Europe and the futility of that war and its cost to us, and how it has destroyed instead of preserved democracy, he would oppose, even to going to jail, any attempt to thrust us into any foreign war, or any other war, except in defense of our own country.

As a matter of fact, this is nothing but a thinly disguised bit of British propaganda, their denials to the contrary, to get us into the Ethiopian mess to protect her African interests.

Camp Letts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read the following on the sports page of The Post of September 4:

"Camp Letts, Md., Sept. 3.—This secluded little Boy Scout camp on the banks of the Rhodes River went Hollywood today as the George Washington University football squad performed for the benefit of a squad of newsreel cameramen, etc."

I do hope the newsreel cameramen are better informed than your reporter. Please be good enough to inform him that Camp Letts is owned and operated by the Washington Young Men's Christian Association and has been for 15 years. It is named in honor of one of our outstanding citizens, John C. Letts.

I might also point out that it is on Rhode River and in view of the fact that we have 219 acres, it is not so "little."

It may be of interest for him to know that the Boy Scout camp is named Camp Roosevelt in honor of Theodore Roosevelt.

An Antiquated Highway.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer of the recent letter, "The Defense Highway," is surely living in the horse-and-buggy days when he talks of driving 20 miles an hour. Anyone who drives over good mountain roads, such as the Lincoln highway in Pennsylvania, knows if a road is properly laid out with good grades, curves correctly banked and with long radii, it is possible to take the curves at 40 miles an hour with ease.

The trouble with the Defense highway is that it was laid out about 15 years ago when cars were not high-powered. It has not kept pace with the developments of the motor industry as have all through national highways. In Pennsylvania, millions have been spent on revising alignment and grades on the Lincoln highway alone. And this was a good road for the "horse-and-buggy era." You cannot make a driver with a high-powered car fit his pace to an antiquated highway.

The very heavy traffic shows that this Defense highway is a necessity. On week-ends the road is congested for miles east of Bladensburg. It shows that this entrance to Washington is a grave mistake. Maryland avenue should be extended 120 feet wide and the bridge over Anacostia River at New York avenue should be built and a new connection to a new Defense highway built from the District line.

The motorist who pays a gasoline tax of 5 cents a gallon in Maryland has a right to demand modern highways. DILWORTH PQWEL.

"The Pagan Of Pagans."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the interest of truth and the clarification of thought, attention should be brought to making fish out of Mussolini and fowl out of Hitler. The clergy who are filling the air and the press with cries of "paganism," cannot conceal the fact that until the church is ready to place these two men side by side, no intelligent person is ready to heed their cry.

Both these men are products of the church that is now assailing one as "pagan;" the church doubtless feels the pain that it "nursed the pinion which guided the dart" at its heart. Every right-thinking man appreciates that feeling and sympathizes with it. But we wish to hear from those dignitaries some straightforward, unmistakable denunciation of Mussolini's paganism in attempting to invade a helpless and little-offending if not unoffending country, on the plea of "civilizing" it. If the reading public does not get an impression that the Emperor of Abyssinia is the more civilized and Christian of the two men, then our intelligent public must have a notion of "Christianity" that is wide of the mark.

But this is not all the world charges Mussolini with doing. He is the most insistent proponent of war of any now known ruler. Where is church authority or church influence that it is not used to let him know that he is the pagan of pagans in his attitude to that which civilization seeks to outlaw? Why cannot our church people as a whole join in a mighty protest, which will include in it the Pope and every clergyman under him, to thunder at this pagan dictator in tones that will come up from this country like the sound of many waters?

The Post Impressionist

"Perfect Woman Nobly Planned."

Post Office, Friday.

IN the deepening twilight of loyalties there had thus far remained—at least in America—one figure whereon the iconoclast's horrid hammer dared not descend. You could find some so-called Republicans who blinked the Constitution. You could discover a few Democrats who doubted the New Deal. But, until today, the American who intimated that the American Woman wasn't perfection would have been set upon by all Americans — would have been hanged, drawn and quartered, as every traitor ought to be.

Alas, precisely today (for this is the day of its publication) there comes forth a book which—

However, listen a minute and form your own judgment.

"Why is it that in America romantic love doesn't manifest itself more often? . . .

"For generations the idea has been developed (in the American woman) that love is to be handled with caution. Love is dangerous. . . Thus grew up the inhibition complex . . . adhered to in all walks of life . . . Even when these traditions suffered a severe blow, from numerous causes, among which enormous industrial development was an important one, the American woman still preserved vestiges of a deeply ingrained caution in regard to a 'great love.'

"'I don't want to suffer on account of love'—you may hear that speech from nearly every American girl. She means that she does not want spiritual suffering that may be the cause of falling in love. She wants a happy love. But how is one to be sure which love will turn out happily? Thus begins her reasoning."

And what's its end? "To attempt to justify love by means of rationalization is frequently a failure.

"The fact that the American girl and woman is (sic) frequently deeply romantic by nature is obvious. But she has not been properly educated, she has not yet found her ideal love. The old ideal—her mother's and grandmother's—seems to her too abstract and outmoded, something like a Victorina set of rules for proper conduct, and fails to satisfy her ardent desire to understand the essence of happy love and to give full expression to her need for it . . . If she has no clear ideal of womanhood, that is not her fault . . . Torn between the ideals presented by the large-circulation magazines on the one hand, and the literary magazines on the other, she feels lost.

"One must understand . . . that love does not consist merely in being loved: active loving is a far more precious thing. That is why one should forget pride, and stop tormenting oneself with endless questions: How does he love me? Does he love me enough? That should matter little. The important thing to a woman is to love."

* * *

Can you guess the sex of the speaker? Anyway, although he was born in Russia, he's been six years in the United States and is, we understand an American citizen.

Old, of course?—Only 42.

What's more, he is a scientist. Boris Sokoloff's "life, starting from his youth, was consecrated to science." He "has worked in the most advanced cancer institutes." The Rockefeller Institute invited him to colaborate with Loeb. "At present he is on the staff of the International Prophylactic Cancer Institute."

It must be the very place to learn about that disease accompanied by cachexia and progressive emanciation which is commonly called Love. Anyhow, if—as we are—you are proof against his premises, and if—as we do—you know a bit more concerning love than concerning biology, you may find a good deal to interest you in his "Achievement of Happiness" (Simon & Schuster). It sets love at the top of the catalogue, argues that "all human beings possess the capacity for happiness"—and then attempts to indicate a road to that condition.

Nevertheless, what interests us just now is the problem of this scientist's own happiness.

He does doubt his competence to discuss the American Woman. But he does discuss her.

He does say that, "now, at least, she is beginning to feel free." But, if any Americna women are more than 20 years old, won't all such read a personal rebuke in his references to the American woman's past—and partially present—"suppression and inhibition of emotions?"

Declaring that "a woman's love is necessary, first of all, to herself," Dr. Sokoloff does add: "When American women understand this—when they find themselves—then this country will become the country of romanticism and romantic love." But won't every lovely American woman—yes, and even every rugged American man—want to tear Dr. Sokoloff to pieces for his implication that American woman has ever lost herself?

Or are we so indurated that we shall receive without retaliation this ultimate blow of the Phrygian mallet?

Fair Enough

Out-moded Statehood.

New York, Sept. 5.

IF I interpret Mr. Roosevelt's Administration correctly up to now it is his idea that the States have become horse-and-buggy institutions and that this country should become a solid Nation with unified interests.

The NRA was intended to extend the authority of the national Government into the tiniest transactions of the general store in the most benighted Mississippi crossroads. The Department of Agriculture has been counting ears of corn and hills of potatoes with the idea of controlling the operations of the farmer on the scrubbiest side-hill patch. Individual householders have been invited to ignore State lines and borrow money from the Federal Government with which to paint their barns and install new plumbing in their homes. The Common Man is to be ordered off his acres if they are unable to support him and shifted to better acres somewhere else. The consumer will be offered electricity and the curling irons and percolators with which to use electricity, under the auspices of the national Government, which would also find jobs for people, regulate their pay and hours and decide how much they may keep of what they earn.

These innovations have not all been accomplished, but Mr. Roosevelt's intention seems clear. It has been necessary to organize a national police force, the fly cops of the Department of Justice, known as G-men, to go on the prowl and shoot it out with ordinary stick-ups in order to suppress an outbreak of crime which the States should have been able to control if their own cops were not incompetent and, in too many cases, merely neighborhood bulldozers.

• • • •

IT has come to such a state that if two barflies get into a scrap in a gutter in Fort Wayne, Ind., as to which one treats his wife worse and ought to be horsewhipped first, the mayor calls the sheriff and the sheriff yells for troops and the Governor cranks up his telephone to howl for Homer Cummings to send out Young King Brady and Nick Carter to suppress a situation which has got out of hand.

The States can't hire honest and efficient bank examiners to prevent white collar thieves from opening and closing stucco banks, and their public service commissioners often sanction the sort of robberies which Mr. Roosevelt, in theory, has been trying to forbid.

Between the individual residents (you would hardly call them citizens) of the several States no distinction exists. A South Dakota man is at home in South Carolina, and a man from the State of Washington speaks the same language and thinks about alike with his neighbors should he find himself in Maine or Florida.

• • • •

THE fact is that the States, as political subdivisions, have forfeited their excuse to exist. True, New York is a bigger State than Utah or Arkansas, but New York couldn't possibly go it alone if secession were possible. Therefore, instead of 48 States, each preying on the rest in Washington and each one trying to outmooch the other in a ruinous competition, a Nation divided, perhaps, into half a dozen districts with local administrative offices responsible to the Big Store, would seem much more desirable. They might have district legislatures. That could be worked out.

But my point is that I think I get Mr. Roosevelt's idea and wish he would put it into words instead of backing into the proposition as he has been doing with his attempts to establish the Federal Government as a great national sucker—Dutch Uncle—nurse and Fall Guy for the 48 divisions which are unable to do business as States any more. If that is Mr. Roosevelt's idea it would cause no more commotion than he has caused already, from time to time, to lay it on the line frankly in one of his radio orations and let the citizens think it over.

• • • •

MONEY would be saved by the obliteration of about 40 Legislatures and State administrative organizations, and the relations between the people of widely separated sections would be made much more intimate and sympathetic. There is no racial difference between a Hoosier and a Texan, for example, but they are both contributing the least they can and drawing as much as they can out of a national Treasury. If they both were given to understand, however, that it is impossible to pour more out of a bottle than is put into the bottle they might also understand that the interest of one was the interest of the other.

All of Mr. Roosevelt's works have intimated a belief that the entire country ought to be brought closer to the national Government, but he has said nothing up to now about the abolition of State lines and State government which exist only because they were established arbitrarily in the days when present conditions could not be imagined.

"The Wise Man"

By

William Lyon Phelps

THE human mind has not improved in 40,000 years; there has been an immense diffusion of culture; and the ability to read and write, which was once a great and unusual accomplishment, now attracts no more attention than the ability to breathe; but so far as we can find out, the mind of primitive man was just as able as the mind of today.

• • • •

Thus we should never be astonished at exhibitions of intelligence on the part of men in ancient times; or at some of them being more civilized than we are ourselves. All we can do is to admire individual genius, whether it appeared 700 years before Christ, or last week; whether the possessor of it be Thales or Einstein.

Now Thales, from whom I quoted a few days ago, successfully predicted a total eclipse of the sun which took place May 28, 585 B. C. How did he do this? I don't know; I don't know how they do it now. Only I know there are probably 50,000 people who can do it; it is apparently no trick at all, if your books and tools are handy. But Thales had no magnifying glass and no books.

• • • •

Thales was not only the most learned man of his time, he was the most wise. He combined learning and wisdom, two qualities by no means always found together. His practical advice was almost as remarkable as his intellectual achievements. He was called "Wise Man," later one of the Seven Wise Men—there have never been many at any one time—a Philosopher and "The Sage of Miletus."

Philippine President

Policies Subordinated To Personalities In Commonwealth's First Campaign—Senate President Manuel Quezon, Aguinaldo, Of 1898 Fame, And Bishop Aglipay Candidates.

By Vicente Albano Pacis.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

STRANGE as it may seem, and in spite of obvious attempts to create new issues, the points of debate in the campaign for the election of September 17, the first under the commonwealth, are narrowing down to those of independence and Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo. This is strange because all hands seem to admit that the question of independence has been settled by Congress, yet the only real clash of opinion seems to be on this matter. On the other issues propounded, there appears to be a meeting of minds, with each camp claiming priority in the advocacy of the issues.

Even on the matter of independence, the clash is confined merely to the length of the transition period. Bishop Gregorio Aglipay, who has turned out to be the most radical of the three candidates, would have complete independence tomorrow if he could have his way. Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo, generalissimo of the Philippine revolution, advocates a transition period of from three to five years only. Senate President Quezon has come out flat-footed for the ten years fixed by Congress in the independence law.

Aguinaldo himself comes in as an issue in that his claim to the presidency, based on history and ethics, is being seriously questioned, the general himself, upon announcing his candidacy, pointed to his leadership in 1898 as the chief basis of his new political claim. Immediately, his opponents attacked his claim, pointing out that his past constitutes the best argument against his being elected president.

• • • •

There are any number of issues which the different candidates have taken for airing, but they have not clicked. Among these are the more equitable distribution of taxation burden, the breaking up of the remaining big landed estates owned by Spaniards and the Friars, stability of the currency, fairness to foreigners and foreign capital, greater attention to labor and the organization of a Philippine army for purposes of defense.

On these matters, Quezon's opponents have simply stated that they are ready to do their utmost to carry out the same policies, but add the rather significant question, "If Quezon believes in these policies, why has he not done anything about them during the two decades that he has been president of the senate?"

To this charge, Quezon has formulated a patented reply: As senate president, I have not been the head of the Philippine government; it has been the Governor General. Under the Jones law, it is the Governor General who controls the executive department and initiates legislation. Furthermore, the Jones law does not allow us adequate power and authority to carry out many of our new projects such as, for instance, the expropriation of the big landed estates for purposes of subdivision and sale to tenants.

Aguinaldo's counter-reply has amounted to the old stand-by, "Says you!" Aglipay's has not been any more original: "Same old music which the people are already tired of hearing."

• • • •

QUEZON, however, made of the transition period the major issue when, in his acceptance speech of July 20, he declared:

"I consider it a most disturbing influence which will retard our work of economic readjustment and reconstruction, for anyone to advocate now the shortening of the transition period . . . the Congress of the United States fixed the term of ten years, considering it necessary to allow the Philippines gradually to adjust their national economy to the conditions which will obtain when independence should eventuate, and to permit the Filipinos to prepare themselves adequately for the responsibilities of independent nationhood. It was, therefore, chiefly for the benefit of the Philippines, rather than of the United States, that the intermediate period of ten years was fixed . . ."

• • • •

SENATOR OSMENA, candidate for vice president on the Quezon ticket, took it upon himself to make an issue of Gen. Aguinaldo when he stated in his acceptance speech that the old rebel virtually turned his back to Philippine independence when he surrendered unconditionally to the Americans. After relating the history of the liberation efforts of the Filipinos, he pointed out how he and Quezon took up the task where Aguinaldo unceremoniously abandoned it. He pointed out that—

"The leaders of the revolution unconditionally surrendered to and recognized the American sovereignty . . . the leader of the revolution accepted the terms of peace without any condition and turned his back on the war for independence. So unconditional was the surrender that the Filipino people did not obtain from America even the promise of a remote independence."

Weakly, Gen. Aguinaldo has said in his defense: "I took my oath of allegiance to the United States in jail; Quezon and Osmena took theirs when they were already holding public offices in the new American set-up."

• • • •

THERE is such a strange assortment of candidates for president and vice president of the Commonwealth that a Manila columnist said aptly: "Judging from the present crop of candidates, it seems to be believed in some quarters that anything that warps is political timber."

Here is the assortment for the position of chief executive:

(1) Manuel L. Quezon, a major in the insurrection against the United States and in the revolution against Spain, former resident commissioner in Congress, president of the senate since 1917; (2) Emilio Aguinaldo, generalissimo of the revolution and insurrection, former small-town school teacher, just out of a veritable cocoon to which he had retired after having been captured by Gen. Funston; (3) Bishop Gregorio Aglipay, founder of a native religion mainly differentiated from Catholicism by its independence of Rome and the nonobservance of celibacy among its priests, himself a general in the insurrection.

"Grade A—my eye! Does he think I was born yesterday?"

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

For Reference Only.

ONE of the new buildings at Yale bears over its doorway the sentence: "He was born with the gift of laughter and a sense that the world was mad." A rather pretty sentence, you see, and as soon as its noble length had been carved upon the facade, by order of the architects, speculation in New Haven became what they call rife as to its origin. Who on earth had written it? I am only reporting the story which came to my ears when I declare that the combined wit and wisdom of Yale University, poring over everything from the concordance of Shakespeare to the annotated index of Felicia Hemans, was unable to find its source. An impasse, I hear, which lasted some six or eight months.

Then, as it happened, a young Sheffield instructor was taking his summer rest in a small Vermont resort, and one evening, opening one of the novels embalmed there, what should strike his eye as the first sentence but the long-lost, long-desired inscription. It was the beginning of Sabatini's "Scaramouche."

• • • •

MY intention, with this little parable, is only to show you that there are a few chinks in the doctrine that the educated man is the man who doesn't know everything but who does know where to find it. I do not, of course, make a synonym of Sabatini and culture. But, as anyone who tried Vanity Fair's recent literary questionnaire will recognize, the world is full of items which no amount of searching through index, dictionary, compendium and reference work will ever disclose. A sad fact, my masters. All of us enjoy the vanity that six feet of reference books will make us lords of time and space and all that in them is.

And no one, I confess it gladly, more than myself. Few pleasures are so subtle and so pervasive for me as to realize that, if I ever need to know how to pronounce the Biblical name, Beerlahairoi, I can find it in three seconds. Or that, propounded the question: "Who was Nydia?" I could in a fairly brief search discover that she was a blind girl and a leading character in Lytton's "Last Days of Pompeii." I have, of course, never been asked that.

• • • •

BUT availability, not use, is the point in these matters. Let me commend a few books of reference, then, which spread the wisdom of the ages on the counter. The "Britannica" needs no introduction, though I agree with H. G. Wells that it is extraordinarily verbose. I hope he lives long enough to compile a better encyclopedia, as he proposes. Many a fact not concerned with words you can find more swiftly in "Webster's New International Dictionary."

For words and how to use them with taste, nothing on earth is better than Fowler's "Modern English Usage" (Oxford). For finding words when they've gone glimmering from your head, "Roget's Thesaurus" (Longmans). For words and how they came to be as they are, Ernest Weekley's "An Etymological Dictionary of Modern English" (Dutton). For words in Latin, French, German and other languages, the Cassell Dictionaries (Funk & Wagnalls). All these are indispensable.

Then, very cheerfully, the word-reference books begin to specialize. C. O. Sylvester Mawson's "International Book of Names" (Crowell) gives you more names from history, biography and geography, from all over the world, than you could shake a stick at—with pronunciation of each. The same Mr. Mawson's "Dictionary of Foreign Terms" (Crowell) translates and gives the pronunciation of words and phrases, proverbs and quotations, from more than 50 languages.

• • • •

TOUCH slang, and you can go even more verbally dizzy. I commented Eric Partridge's "Slang Today and Yesterday" (MacMillan), Maurice Weseen's "Dictionary of American Slang" (Crowell) and Howard Rose's "Thesaurus of Slang" (MacMillan). Nobody uses slang unless it comes to him naturally, but it's always nice to know that "dibs" is an option, and a "dicer" a hat.

When you come to literary matters, you can look up the home life of most of the authors now on earth in "Living Authors," "Authors Today and Yesterday" and "The Junior Book of Authors" (H. W. Wilson Co.). For quotations—moderately speaking, that is—"Bartlett's Quotations" (Little Brown) and Stevenson's "Home Book of Quotations" (Dodd Mead). For odd facts in folklore and literature, Brewer's "Dictionary of Phrase and Fable" (Lippincott), and better yet, "Crowell's Handbook for Readers and Writers." Add Ploetz's "Manual of Universal History" (Houghton Mifflin) for dates; the "World Almanac" for Presidents and boat races; the "Congressional Directory" for the official position of that nice young man you met last night, and Winthrop Ames' "What Shall We Name the Baby?" (Simon & Schuster) for the derivation of Philana, and the well-kept bookshelf is equipped for any contingency.

Still, I've been trying to find what to do for a cold in the head. The reference wisdom of the world says nothing about it.

The Once Over

The Garble Sisters.

"What are you so glum about?"

"I don't like the looks of things in Europe. Did you see where Malcolm Campbell has leased the Suez Canal to the Standard Oil Co. by a secret treaty with Haile Comintern?"

"It looks pretty bad over there and I think Rockefeller is making a mistake getting mixed up in it at his age. Do you think America will be drawn in?"

"Well, we certainly invited trouble when we let Secretary Hull send that note to Mussolini saying there would be serious consequences if he didn't keep his agreement with this country."

"What agreement?"

"The one about not letting the Communist International plot against America on Italian soil."

• • • •

"I see where Ababa Balbo has been given a big command in Ethiopia after several years of exile."

"You mean that famous Italian poet who was such a great lover?"

"Yeah. He just wrote another book."

"What do you think of Jimmy Walker returning to this country?"

"I was glad that Washington freed him of that charge of contempt of the United States Senate and let him come back."

"I read where William Randolph Hearst came out publicly, forgave Jimmy everything and suggested him as the Democratic candidate for President in 1936. Wasn't that a surprise?"

"Gee, yes! Do you think Jimmy would run?"

"He'd have a good chance. He made a good Governor."

"What do you think of Borah as the Republican candidate?"

"I think he hurt his chances by that all-night filibuster that kept Congress from providing money for the McGuffey Dam and Tennessee Boulder projects."

FLUSH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste, poisonous matter may develop, causing serious trouble. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes. An English Raincoat of Roseberry Cloth Is a Prized Possession These Rainy Days

Satin Nighties Have Elegance Of Party Gown

Price Modest for Boudoir Frock, Parisian in Its Splendor.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

HERE IS something to start tongues wagging! Those elegant nighties that look like swank evening gowns!

Their satiny texture and draped folds, to say nothing of the decollete backs, are just too, too — but words fail!

Close your eyes and picture them, a colorful array in exotic Oriental pastels, styled with high rolled collars that tie in the back, leaving just garbs of bare back. The way they're gathered in the front in blouse effect gives a marvelous camouflage of fashionable curves.

And then the way they have of fitting snugly around the hips and flaring out at the bottom like a lily chalice, entitles them to all the ecstatic "oh's" and "ah's" of enthralled customers.

Ordinarily, you know, one pays and pays for such Parisian splendor, but in this case, no. The price is modest—if the gowns aren't!

Refrigerator Sets Save Space.

RAIN, SNOW, sleet, or shine, don't wait too long to visit the houseware department of a large downtown store. Here on every table there's a bargain! Among them is a seven-piece refrigerator set which sells for 97 cents. It includes one large container for lettuce tomatoes, etc., two medium containers and four small.

Talk about your modern conveniences, there's none better than this one. It will help you keep the inside of your refrigerator spic and span, it will save your leftovers and prove a godsend when it comes to having all the needed storage space for perishable foodstuffs.

* * * *

Luxurious Handbags.

YOU BOTH forgive and forget the high hat prices of a certain group of handbags once you see them. They're so perfectly equipped, so artistically designed and so exquisite in every particular!

The gentleman with gold-lined pockets who wishes to give his lady love something really worthwhile will feel no hesitancy when he sees these. Nor need he! They'd be welcome gifts to any woman in the world.

These bags are available in both brown and black leather, but choicest of all are the natural pigskin models. Inside you'll find a large mirror, compact, comb, lipstick, change purse, even a place for a cigarette lighter.

Bathroom Scales for $1.88.

EVER so small but ever so handy are the little box-like bathroom scales in the houseware department of a downtown store.

They're so small you can carry them from room to room with positively the greatest of ease. But they're so sturdy they'll tell tales on a heavyweight up to 250 pounds.

These midgets are grand for keeping in the small bathroom where ordinary scales take up all the room. And they're just right, too, for the budget-controlled purse, for they cost only $1.88.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Well-Dressed Men Favor Herringbone Sports Shirt

Among the better articles of men's apparel being worn by the gentlemen above are a Barathea tie of triple contrasting stripes, a suede windbreaker of reindeer gray, an English raincoat and something very special in wrist watches. The luggage pictured is of canvas, with reinforced edges of black cowhide.

Barathea Ties Now Available in Stripes; Pullman Wardrobe Cases Can Be Obtained at Special Prices; Windbreakers Warm and Informal.

By John Q. Alexander.

WHAT WITH RAIN, rain, all around, there's a sneeze for every broken heart on F street this week, and the same people who looked so smart and chipper while the sun shone are now wet and woebegone. The old saw says that virtue, though clothed in rags, will keep you warm. Mebbe so—but it won't keep you dry.

Barring tripping all over oil wells in the dark, unexpected legacies and the like, most of us will remain where we are this winter rather than lead the lazy life of Palm Beach or Miami. That, unfortunately, being that, we must face the fact that though the rain, rain, may go away, it will come again some other day.

The ladies, bless them, have a terrible time trying to preserve their hard-won chic while cats and dogs splash all around them, but for us gents it's another story. The right raincoat can impart to the wearer an enviable air of insouciance, while his streaming hat achieves a certain rakishness and his general appearance becomes weather-beaten and romantic.

Maybe we're wrong, but we've always looked upon walking in the rain as a sentimental pastime, and the item about to be recommended should be worn whenever possible with a sprightly fragment of femininity draped over the right arm. It's an English raincoat (we don't know why the English excel at this sort of thing, unless it's their climate) of a water-proof, weather-proof fabric which looks like fine broadcloth, but is in reality roseberry cloth.

Simply But Elegantly Cut.

It is simply, elegantly cut, with balmacaan collar, the universally popular fly front, raglan shoulders, full back, and two split pockets. An outstanding feature is the two additional pockets in the lining, and a small pocket for cigarets or wallet. The whole get-up is youthful, dashing, and should wear indefinitely. The store showed us one just like these that has been in constant use for 15 years and though not as good as new, of course, it's still better than the ones most of us are wearing. $25, natural tan color. Most of them are self-lined, though a few have the standard plaid lining.

Best sports shirt we've seen this week is of herringbone cheviot, very much in favor just now and perfect for the season coming up. The collar is especially good, being a cross between the standard styles and the new widespread Duke of Kent model. The one we liked best was tan herringbone with a thin, unobtrusive yellow stripe which would go well with tweeds, and the best tie to wear with it would be printed wool. Available in blue, tan and gray, $3.50. Ties in all sorts of colors and patterns, $1.50.

Speaking of ties, the Barathea has long been famous for its texture and durability. Up to now, though, no manufacturer has been able to make it in stripes—it's always been in plain colors. However, after months and months of ceaseless striving, some maker has turned the thing out in stripes, and a very good job he has done on it; $1, and the best tie we've discovered for that money. Where we come from, Baratheas have always been priced around $2.50.

Every man should own a leather windbreaker. They are comforting, warm, and informal, and come in handy all though the months when noses are red and violently blue, as the saying goes. There's a sale on these now—an anniversary or something—for $4.45. Suede, sateen-lined, knit collar, cuffs and waistband. Zipper front and two large pockets. Take your choice of several shades of tan and brown or gray. You won't find them priced this reasonably again for a long time.

Last but not least among this week's items is a wrist watch which is extremely handsome and expensive looking and sells for the unbelievably low price of $4.95. Naturally it's not the best watch in the world but we'll bet it's the best for that price or any price anywhere near it. It has radium hands, and a second hand, and is quite thin and sleek, not fat and bunglesome like most low-priced time-pieces. Comes in a non-tarnishable white or gold metal and is guaranteed for one year against mechanical defects. We defy you to look at one of these without buying it

Tuberculosis of the Intestines Should Be Attacked at Source

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

NOT until in a relatively recent period was tuberculosis of the intestine recognized as such. Now its existence is regarded as an important accompaniment or aftermath of pulmonary tuberculosis. Its presence means that the patient with pulmonary tuberculosis has swallowed sputum containing live bacilli and that they have found a favorable site for growth in the mucous membrane of the intestine. Whenever this situation occurs in some groups (it is said to exist in 50 to 60 per cent of the advanced cases) it may constitute a serious handicap to recovery. Inasmuch as the maintenance of nutrition in the tuberculous patient is of vital importance, the presence of ulcers in the intestine, particularly in the colon, offers a real problem in management. Such a condition interferes with the assimilation of food, favors the absorption of toxins, and often makes it difficult to keep the patient at normal strength.

The management of this form of tuberculosis presents a difficult problem, but is primarily that of attacking the infection in the lungs. It is far wiser to shut off the water that is flooding the basement than to continue to bail out the overflow. If a steady stream of active bacilli is passing into the intestine, reinfections will occur and a permanent cure is impossible.

At the same time attention must be given to the intestinal lesions. The diet should contain from 30 to 50 per cent excess calories, with only a small amount of vegetable fiber, and should be high in vitamins and calcium. Insulin is sometimes recommended for its stimulating effect upon the appetite. It is important that the intestinal contents shall not be bulky, and in many respects the peptic ulcer diet of the convalescent stages serves very well. The object is to reduce to a minimum intestinal contraction, particularly in the portion of bowel that has become diseased. If constipation is troublesome, mineral oil or warm saline enemas are advised, and diarrhea may be controlled by means of barium sulphate or kaolin (powdered clay). This later substance may be taken frequently in half-ounce doses.

These patients require as favorable surroundings as may be procured, and no small amount of encouragement. Few exhibit the hopeful outlook that often characterizes those in whom the disease is limited to the lungs, yet it can be said in all sincerity that no early case is hopeless and many will recover in an environment far from ideal.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have arrived at a place where I don't know which way to turn. To begin with, I am 21, a most bewildering age. For the past 13 years my family has moved from one end of the country to the other and have sustained great financial losses. I must begin to support myself, but as a result of our constant moving about I have no established contacts which might yield advice or assistance.

* * * *

I went to college one year. We spent another year in the wilds of New Hampshire in a small village during which time I took a correspondence course in typing and shorthand. This I did not finish for my parents then came here, whereupon I entered a hospital training school in Boston. I left at the end of my second year in training, because I was extremely unhappy there. I was not deeply in love with actual hospital life, particularly so since I had family financial worries on my mind, and I was not near enough to home to enjoy any family life at all. I had neither friends nor relatives in Boston—none.

* * * *

Please don't think I left training because of lack of "stick-to-itiveness," because I really believe I possess enough stamina to meet life. I wonder if you can understand why I left as I did? I have recently applied for membership in the Emergency Hospital training school here but I find I should have to begin all over again, spend over $100 for books, uniforms, etc., and go through the long period of probation. I can't do that and what's more, I don't want to.

* * * *

What I should like to do is utilize the fruits of my two years' hard labor at training by getting a job. I know a little typing and practically as much about nursing technique as I would had I graduated. I know lots of girls who have left training and gone to work in a doctor's office, answering calls, sending bills, giving serums, vaccines, etc., with even less training than mine. That is the type of job I should like to have. I could do practical nursing or assist in a dentist's office, but the first mentioned job is the one I should prefer.

* * * *

I am attractive, my personality seems to be pleasant enough, I can meet people with the necessary amount of poise and self-containment and I am willing to work hard 12 or even more hours a day. I think that about covers it. Now could you give me any suggestions about how to begin my campaign for work?

Most truly yours. F. M.

Advice to a Girl.

DEAR F. M.: I suggest you talk with Mrs. C F. Waters, registrar of the Kalorama Nurses' Association, 2400 Thirteenth street northwest. The telephone number is COlumbia 6718, and you might make an appointment in advance. Mrs. Waters tells me she occasionally finds it possible to place undergraduate nurses in suitable positions.

The only way to go about getting a job as assistant in a doctor's or dentist's office is to make the rounds of such offices, presenting your application. However, I am told that a constant procession of girls seeking such positions wends its way through virtually every physician's and dentist's office in the city every day. In order to keep their spirits up in the face of this dismal phenomena, physicians have adopted a jocular attitude, one in particular remarking that at least it makes his office look like it's full of patients. In order to handle the work of such a position, I am told one must be something of a laboratory technician, as well as an efficient stenographer and bookkeeper.

* * * *

Don't let these facts discourage you, however. Some of the best jobs have been captured by persons who rushed in where others feared to tread. Often it's only a matter of striking while the iron is hot, by which I mean to say being there at a time when an opening exists. I like the way you get down to cases in your letter, and am prepared to take your word for it that you are poised, attractive and capable of making your living.

* * * *

But what you must learn, if ever you expect to make a success of your life, is this: "When a thing is once begun, never leave it 'til it's done." Walking out on situations for no other reason than that they happen to make one unhappy is pretty poor training for life. And life, for you, isn't something that still waits to be met around some future corner. You're living it now, and everything you do or fail to do is playing it's subtle part in shaping your eventual destiny. There's no use crying over spilt milk, but I think you would have been wiser, and would have stood to profit more, had you seen the hospital training course through to the bitter (if bitter it was) end.

* * * *

Hardships gallantly endured take on a pleasing luster in retrospect. Neglected opportunities for self development are a constant source of regret, and often the beginning of a useless and discontented life. In future, don't make the mistake of conserving your "stamina" for later application. Remember that "true worth is in being, not seeming; in doing each day that goes by some little good, not in dreaming of great things to do by and by—! M. H.

Patterns Remove All Hazards In Making Your Own Hats

Pattern No. 989.

EVER MADE a hat? It's really lots of fun. And here are two perfect patterns that remove all the hazards. They fit, they flatter, and they go together without a single hitch.

Halos are the latest fashion news. Big berets are, too. Wouldn't it be a grand idea to make one of these to match that new fall frock? And then another out of that leftover piece of velvet or the bit of satin saved from last year? It takes so little fabric, so little time. And what a satisfaction! Sizes are 21½, 22, 22½, and 23. In 22, the beret requires ½ yard any width fabric, ribbon and lining; and the turban takes ⅞ yard, any width, and lining.

Originality Marks Designs Of This Millinery Firm

Strange, bizarre hats come and go, but they are only fads, insists Mr. Frederic, well-known millinery designer. He insists that hats styled on simple, classic lines are always best.

Simplicity Is the Rule Governing Work of John & Frederic, of New York; Feature Toques, Pill Boxes and Felts.

What is the inside story of hat designing? Read it as told by John and Frederic, New York milliners, who discuss many hat questions in the following article, the eighth in a series of interviews with outstanding American designers.

By Frances Mangum.

TWO MILLINERS who do not believe in "getting in the style swim" are Mr. John and Mr. Frederic, of the firm John-Frederic's.

"We go in for originality!" they said emphatically. And they showed their collection of fall hats for proof.

"We design neither for young people, nor old," said Mr. Frederic, "but our hats are uniformly youthful. America shrieks for youth," he explained.

"Our hats are not for the masses," said Mr. John. "Each model has its own individuality, and no two are alike!"

Mr. John and Mr. Frederic have made simplicity the keynote of their work.

"We watch the strange, bizarre creations come and go," said Mr. John.

Simple, Classic Lines.

"And finally simmer down to simple, classic lines," added Mr. Frederic.

No matter whether stylists say we're going Russian, Renaissance, Mexican, or Regency, Mr. John and Mr. Frederic continue with their "all-American" designs.

"Other trends are more or less fads," said Mr. John. "We believe in strict conservatism!"

He went on to explain that it was not the color, the trimming, or the material of the hat that really mattered. "It's the style," he said. "And that style is a certain intangible thing that you can feel when you see a really good-looking hat! Nothing daring and strange. We both think it is far better for a woman to be recognized in a quiet way than because her clothes boldly demand attention."

Toques, Pill Boxes and Felts.

Three types of hats in which Mr. John and Mr. Frederic are evincing particular interest this season are toques, pill boxes and tailored, soft brimmed felts. They are enthusiastic about a new shade of brown, light with much orange in it, which they call the "Frederic brown." This they say will be extremely attractive with black. And then, there is a porcelain blue and a burgundy red, and oxblood which they place in the first-color ranks.

Watch tomorrow's Post for Mme. Nicole's advice on how to select a hat.

Remain Calm When Infant Swallows Bead

By Alice Clarissa Richmond,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

"The baby has swallowed a bead! What shall I do?"

To the young mother such an occurrence is a catastrophe, and she is apt to lose her head, call in the doctor, talk of X-rays and watch for signs of strangling in the child.

Of course, beads and other hard objects are not a healthy diet, and should be limited in quantity. But most youngsters eat a good many such things before they learn not to put whatever they see into their mouths, and are none the worse for it. The best antidote is a good-sized piece of dry, soft bread. Water should not be given under any circumstances.

A baby's chief pleasure in life is eating, and he will of course try whatever he can lay hand on. For that reason care should be taken that his toys and whatever is left within his reach should be of fast color, so that it may be sucked without injuring his digestion. Small objects, such as beads, should be strung on a stout string, dolls and toy animals should be deprived of glass eyes if these show any likelihood of coming off easily; safety pins should never be left open, ordinary pins and needles should be kept out of reach, even threads and string should not be left lying about, for they can prove more dangerous to the digestion than hard objects.

Some children have a fondness for eating dirt. One small girl's favorite tidbit was a morsel of coal. These strange tastes offer no cause for worry unless they continue after babyhood is past.

Tomorrow Brings Deadline in Contest For Apple Recipes

Don't put off until tomorrow what you should do today. Enter your favorite apple recipe in The Post's contest at once so it will be received by Saturday and in time for the judging of prizes. Remember that if you win one of these 12 weekly prizes of $1 you will be eligible to win one of the three grand prizes that The Post and the National Electric Supply Co. are offering at the end of this contest. If you win but one weekly prize your recipe will be entered in the final drawing which is to determine the winners of the three grand prizes, namely, a Sunbeam Mixmaster, a G. E. Hotpoint coffee maker, and a Dominion sandwich grill.

Send your apple recipe to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post and be sure that it is posted in time to reach this office by Saturday.

The names of prize winners and their recipes will appear in next Tuesday's edition of The Washington Post and at the same time the new contest for next week will be announced.

Kitchen Work On Sunday Cut By These Menus

Saturday Night's Roast Can Be Served Cold With Gravy.

By Dorothea Duncan.

EVERY HOUSEWIFE wants to do as little cooking as possible on Sunday. Yet at the same time she wants to serve her family a well-balanced and generous meal. One way of meeting this problem is to cook the roast for the Sunday dinner on Saturday and serve it hot Saturday night with an interesting sauce. Then on Sunday the cold meat can be sliced thin, placed on a warm platter and covered with hot gravy.

This is a more desirable way of reheating the sliced meat, as further cooking may toughen it or impair the flavor. A piquant lemon mallobet served as an accompaniment to the sliced meat will also enhance its flavor.

Orange Mint Sauce.

½ cup vinegar
½ cup orange juice
½ cup fresh mint leaves, chopped
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
4 tablespoons sugar.

Heat vinegar and pour over remaining ingredients. Chill. Serve with roast lamb. Makes one cup of sauce.

Lemon Mallobet.

24 marshmallows
⅓ cup water
½ cup lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon grated lemon rind
Dash salt
2 egg whites.

Melt the marshmallows with the water in top of double boiler. When completely melted, remove from stove and add lemon juice, grated rind and salt. Turn into refrigerator tray and freeze to a mush. Beat the egg whites until stiff, stir the fruit mixture and fold into the beaten egg whites. Return to refrigerator tray and continue freezing, stirring once when the mallobet has again frozen to a mush. Serves six.

Jelleff's
believe in the 40-hour week!

and will continue to operate on these hours for their employes the same as during the past year.

This is in addition to an increase in salaries more than six months ago bringing practically all salaries above minimum requirements of the retail code then in force.

We are conscious of the fact that a retail business can be more efficiently operated upon a 48-hour basis—and that our profits would be much larger if we went back to former working conditions.

But Jelleff's prefer never to go back, and are willing to forego profits with feeling that this is for the betterment of all.

We take this way of showing our appreciation of the remarkable business which we have been able to maintain throughout the depression years and we hereby express OUR thanks to the women of Washington for their ever-increasing patronage and to our employes for their splendid service and loyalty.

Habana Yields To Downpour, Closes Its Roof

Opens Indoors Sept. 27; Powhatan Waiter's Tip, on Rain, Profitable.

By Chanticleer.

That weather prognosticator Ramon ballyhooed so highly . . . at the Powhatan Roof . . . probably is on a waiter's pension by this time. It is a matter of no little significance that Ramon pulled the flag down from the Powhatan roof mast just a few hours before the great modern spectacle of the opening heavens began its lang run at all amusement centers.

Up at the Club Habana, where only a brief few days ago the gentle evening breezes whispered sweet and cool nothings to the customers, Host Guy Scott elected to linger on. And see what happened. I wasn't present but what probably happened was that Guy, about the third day of the rains, said to himself with feeling—phooie! because Club Habana's summer season ended Wednesday night. For the last month, Host Scott has been cogitating over plans for fall and winter at the old Connecticut avenue spot opposite the Mayflower.

And now, ladeez and gentlemunn, the gala reopening is announced for September 27. The moving vans will be swarming around the Arlington's front door next week as the Club Habana—bag and baggage—is carried back to ye olde stande.

• • • •

Down at Bill Levy's Hangar Club they don't even know it's raining. The roof has been deserted, pending favorable weather, and every one is as snug as a hunter by a cabin fireplace these evenings. The door is open 24 hours a day for the young folks who want sweet music and soft lights out of the precipitation.

• • • •

And no rain yet has fooled 'em out at Maryland Club Gardens. When the urge settles down over you for a real Maryland fried chicken dinner, for example, you go to the Gardens in exactly the same gala spirit as though the stars were doing an early June act. Al Barkley and his New Yorkers, Bob Dunnington and his accordion, the floor show, waiters and all move in from the terrace and porch to the winter gardens. In fact, it has one definite advantage; stop to think about it: the bar is closer.

• • • •

Flash: Hall's Restaurant—down by the waterfront—has oysters, good old September oysters again—fried, baked, half shell, soup or any other way your taste approves. There's a powerful lot of folks who for years and years have always thought that Hall's and oysters were synonymous.

• • • •

With Emily it's just a matter of change of wardrobe and different instructions to the hack driver. Emily, late of the Powhatan, will be back in the cigarette vending business next Monday—at Hamilton's Rainbow Room. Cigars, cigarettes! Emily's got 'em.

• • • •

Bill Strickland, proprietor of the Lotus Restaurant Orchestra, has been keeping one eye on the Jimmy Bright—"Countess" Virginia Howard get-together and a night or so ago assembled a few of the people for a test of the countess's cooking ability . . . figuring Jimmy might as well know first as last whether the Lotus' little dancer would do as well in the kitchen as in the dancing line. So he bought a huge sack of eggs and loaded the principals in the romance into cars, with the guests, and dropped in at a friend's house for the culinary experiment. It seems Master Richard Koons and Frank Garner, minions of the maestro, and Miquel and Enrica, featured dancers on the Lotus floor show this week, and Latell and Dell, who do the Bonzo act, were the witnesses.

• • • •

If you haven't heard too much about rain, which I believe is reported falling in these parts, it might be interesting to look in at the Mayflower Lounge, where Buddy Harmon and orchestra are melodically pouring, too. Some of the numbers in keeping with the weather as played by the Harmon-izers are "Isn't It Lovely to Be Caught in the Rain" from "Top Hat;" "A Rainy Day," from "Flying Colors;" "Singing in the Rain," "Running Between the Raindrops," "April Showers" and so on. Bet they haven't played "Rain on the Roof" yet. The customers are singing the "Top Hat" song to the line—"Isn't it lovely to be caught in the lounge (on a rainy day)."

• • • •

Barnee and his Maxim Lowe orchestra are watching their musical p's and q's this week what with a noted German pianist as a nightly guest and the owner of four valuable Stradivarius violins also a Shoreham guest. These folks who know music from the ground up can catch a blue note while it's still in its swaddling clothes. Dade and Weir headline the supper floor show, now in the ballroom, with their "Phantasie" numbers, supported by Portia Portar, the conqueror of the bull-fighting arena, and Hal Sidare, eccentric dancer.

• • • •

Those murals at the new Volga Boatman, which opens soon on Thomas Circle, are not the only changes being made to capture the after-dark favor. A complete new kitchen is being built! It's the plan of Matt Windsor to have the cleanest and most modern kitchen in town. There'll be a sign over the kitchen door inviting the patron to make a tour of inspection as his steak sizzles and his salad is assembled.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, Sept. 5.

THE flicker, "Alice Adams," begins and the audience is shown a newspaper office, a gown shop and a 5 and 10 cent store. Katharine Hepburn is seen walking out of the 5 and 10 cent store. She enters the doorway of the gown shop to gaze at a dress. Then, according to George Clossay, Miss Hepburn walks right next door into a florist shop. Mr. Clossay asks "How come the florist shop got where the newspaper office was?"

HEPBURN.

In "The Irish in Us," it is emphasized that Pat O'Brien has only one good suit to wear when he takes off his police uniform. In fact, a fine comedy sequence is derived from this fact. Yet for the prize fight scene, says Helen Natusch, Pat O'Brien is seen in a new, natty suit. But, says Miss Natusch, these details mean nothing to a flicker. An actor seldom pays the check in a restaurant.

Ian Hunter and Colin Clive are drinking at a club in "The Girl From Tenth Avenue." While they are seated at a table, claims Regina Lewandowski, Ian keeps filling his glass with liquor, but not once is he seen drinking it. A rather cute trick of Mr. Hunter's, this glass filling act without being seen emptying it.

This equals all the tricks William Powell does in a flicker when he can have a glass of liquor in his fist.

• • • •

ERIC BLORE and a group of men are playing cards in a train sequence in "Diamond Jim." Blore is wearing a cap in this scene. Edward Arnold notices that Blore is being cheated and endeavors to protect him. A fight takes place, and Blore and Arnold jump off the train. It is then, according to Max Goldstein, that Eric Blore is wearing a high silk hat.

This is a flicker flaw which can be chalked against the script girl. The train sequence was shot on the set, and the scene when they are walking the tracks was shot later, outdoors. The script girl failed to see that the costumes corresponded.

In "Hooray For Love," an actor, in order to avoid paying the check, leaves the duchess at the table and walks away. In this scene the actor takes out a cigar, but does not light it. However, says Herbert Chad, when the actor and the duchess get outside he has half a cigar in his hand, and as yet he hasn't smoked it.

• • • •

Charles Boyer buys many shares of stock in the flicker, "Shanghai," and he is seen being given the original report slip to buy from the broker. Instead, claims David Schleifer, he should have been given the duplicate slip. One can easily tell that Boyer is given the original because of the carbon on back of the slip.

One would believe, says Schleifer, that directors would know how to purchase the stocks right, even if they don't know the right stocks to purchase.

JOSEPH CALLEIA, the gangster, in "Public Hero Number One," enters a theater, and it is in this sequence that there is a prominent flicker flaw, according to Jack Pashkovsky. Jack insists that he knows about this boner, for he is an usher in a theater.

Calleia enters the theater as the show is almost finished. Jean Arthur is the cashier at the theater. The manager of the theater recognizes Calleia and phones the G-Men. The G-Men arrive and wait in their cars until Miss Arthur leaves. As soon as Miss Arthur hands over the box office receipts to the manger and walks away, the G-Men enter the lobby and ask the manager how soon the show will be over. He answers, "In about ten minutes."

Now, who ever heard of any theater selling tickets up to ten minutes before the show ends? They should try to learn how the theaters are managed.

• • • •

Clark Gable is seen speaking to Wallace Beery in "China Seas" on the dock before the boat sets sail.

The background of this scene, writes Eileen Noonan, is composed of the harbor with many ships at anchor. Suddenly, this background changes to another scene. Then, during the conversation, it changes back to the harbor with the ships at anchor.

The ship leaves the port in "China Seas," says Isie Green, and after storms and fights and love affairs, the ship docks again and Gable is in the same port he started from. The same Chinese woman greets the Chinese cook on delk. If they got to another port, she traveled faster than the boat.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Manhattan Promenade.

New York, Sept. 5.

KNOCK-down-and-drag-'em-out comeback of Irving Berlin, with five hit tunes in "Top Hat" is the highlight of the 1935 Broadway season, though nobody has as yet commented upon it . . . Not long back, the Stem was convinced that Berlin was all washed up, a back number. Gordon and Revel headed a new detachment of songwriters, who apparently buried him in their backwash as they scurried to the lyrical heights . . . After all, it was as long ago as 1911 that Berlin had streaked through Tin Pan Alley heavens with "Alexander's Ragtime Band" . . . But the veteran of 25 years of song writing bided his time . . . Now "Top Hat" makes him the No. 1 tunesmith of the country all over again, and the comeback is as spectacular as though Man o' War came out of his Lexington pastures to whip Discovery . . . Berlin, after a quarter of a century, is still the Head Man.

• • • •

Thin-faced, dark-eyed and dark-haired, Berlin embodies all the sorrow and lament of his race . . . His songs are clews to his own emotions . . . "When I Lost You" was written after his first wife, Dorothy Goetz, died a few months after their honeymoon . . . His "Remember" and his "Always," the tenderest torch songs ever composed, were written when he was wooing, apparently in vain, the lovely Ellin Mackay . . . The Mackay millions could erect all sorts of barriers in their attempt to keep the couple apart, but Berlin shot his songs into the air and they carried his pleadings straight to her, for the whole world was chanting the words . . . And so, for Berlin's sake and Ellin Mackay's sake, I'm tickled to death that he is again the No. 1 man of Tin Pan Alley . . . It's swell.

Jack Dempsey turned down a $5,000 offer to play a week at Loew's State (he says he doesn't want to be an actor) . . . Georges Carpentier, who fought Dempsey, is being sued in Paris, not because his little dog was indiscreet, but because he laughed at the victim . . . Doris Wester is the only amateur hour winner who is making dough, I think . . . She got herself $250 a week at the Rockefeller Rainbow Room, and now goes into the Central Park Casino . . . Joe Pincus is screen-testing her at Fox with a starting figure of $500 per . . . Bob Williams, owner of the amazing dog, Red Dust, gets married to his "Anything Goes" lovely on Saturday . . . Rainy Labor Day hurt all of the seashore resorts, but fattened the theaters . . . The Floyd Odlum deal is still on the fire at RKO, with David Sarnoff and Mike Meehan in line for cash settlements, and Meehan probably handling the stock in Wall street.

• • • •

Any comparison of Katharine Hepburn in "Alice Adams" with Greta Garbo in "Anna Karenina" would favor La Hepburn . . . Loretta Young's maw calls her Gretchen, which is her real tag . . . Eleanor Powell ran off with the notices when the Shubert hit opened at Boston . . . Bob Taplinger, fine publicity man with C. B. S., now has an agency of his own, with the entire industry wishing this grand lad the best of luck . . . Tito Coral is now at Joe Zelli's . . . Swell-looking bunch of kids who pulled the Teagle boat to victory in the International Lifeboat Races on the Hudson . . . Aside to Hollywood cameramen and directors: Stop taking shots of an orchestra through the strings of the harp . . . It's driving this Harp nuts . . . Overheard in the subway: "Some of my best friends are Ethiopians" . . . What a tag line that would be for Bill Robinson in a picture.

• • • •

BRAD NORMAN and Eleanor Jones are married and honeymooning at Newport! . . . Phil Harris, whose band excited the Opening Nighters at the Waldorf used to play drums in a Chattanooga, Tenn., theater . . . Ned Dobson's back in town . . .

Arlene—I took a look at that page opposite the comics this morning. Turn to it now and see all the used car bargains there. Especially the '34 Ford coupe for only $490.

WPA Jobs Sought For Ex-Service Men

Auxiliary Rejects Plan to Elect by Secret Ballot.

By Clyde H. DuBose,
A Staff Correspondent.

Ocean City, Md., Sept. 5.—Condolences of the Maryland State Department of American Legion over the death of 75 World War veterans in the hurricane-torn area were dispatched today to the Florida State Legion commander.

Opening the second day of the seventeenth annual convention the Maryland Department also resolved to use its influence to open WPA jobs to unemployed veterans. It was suggested that veterans could use WPA time to search out and mark graves of comrades. A recommendation asked that "every effort be made to see that the graves are marked as each of these defenders of the Nation is entitled to the tribute of a moment's thought at least from a passer-by."

Another resolution appropriated $400 for prizes to be awarded in the drum and bugle corps contests. A financial report, submitted by Treasurer Fred G. Baugh, showed the department $112 above its budget. Baugh pointed out the year was begun with a handicap of $2,000.

Commander McNulty Presides.

Commander John F. McNulty, who presided at the session held in the high school auditorium, challenged the legionnaires to have faith and confidence in the American Government, its traditions, ideals and principles. "Throughout the past year the legion has gone right down the middle of the road of this America," he said. "True to its ideas and traditions, unswerving in its purposes of service to God and country, the legion has kept the faith."

The women's auxiliary, holding its first private session, voted down a move to put all auxiliary elections on a secret ballot basis. Mrs. Jonathan E. Wheatley, of Cambridge, national vice president, spoke strongly in favor of the open ballot. It was announced that the national auxiliary headquarters have asked for immediate information on Maryland's child labor laws. It was said that Maryland was one of four States that has not complied with this request. A report on the work done by the women at the Perry Point Veterans Hospital was made by Mrs. Louise Couper, chairman of the rehabilitation committee.

Mrs. O'Connor Is Guest.

It was pointed out that all luxuries and recreation at this hospital are furnished by the Legion Auxiliary. Among the guests attending the session was Mrs. Edith O'Connor, of Washington, national executive committee woman. Delegates continued to arrive as the afternoon brought some relief from rain. The legion reported 101 delegates, 23 alternates and the auxiliary 140 delegates. These figures, however, do not include the scores of legionnaires and auxiliary members who are not delegates, and the several drum and bugle corps.

By 3 p. m., skies had brightened somewhat and the scheduled parade, late in starting, added the first colorful touch to the convention. Led by the massed colors of the allied nations, numerous drum and bugle corps, legionnaires and auxiliary members marched the entire length of the mile and a half boardwalk returning along Baltimore avenue. The reviewing stand was in front of the George Washington Hotel. Gov. Harry W. Nice is expected to address the annual banquet tonight. A ball will be held at 10 p. m.

Purchased for $1, Chair Yields $840

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 5.—J. D. Blades, of Vienna, paid $1 for a chair at a used-furniture store here two weeks ago and today exhibited $840 in cash and a gold watch as dividends on his investment.

When he removed the old tapestry to re-upholster the chair, Blades found the money and watch cached in the cushions. The money was in 10 and 20 dollar bills of the old elongated type, the most recent issue bearing the date of 1904.

P. W. Parsons, operator of the store, said he had bought the chair at a Philadelphia warehouse.

Legion Parley Under Way at Virginia Beach

17 Army Planes Welcome Delegates to Annual Convention.

By the Associated Press.

Virginia Beach, Va., Sept. 5.—Heralded by 17 Army planes in a demonstration of welcome, more than 1,000 members of the Virginia American Legion, its auxiliary and the "Forty-and-Eight" began their annual convention this morning by hearing speeches by an aspirant for a United States Senatorship, a candidate for Governor of Virginia and an Army Air Corps commander.

As committees of the legion met this afternoon, the "Forty-and-Eight" staged a stirring parade, followed by a business meeting, the annual dinner and a "grand wreck" on the roof garden of the Pinewood Hotel tonight.

Rain Threatens Parade.

Entertainment features of the legion program tonight are headed by a dance in the Cavalier Hotel ballroom. Rain threatened to cause postponement of a beauty pageant, at which "Miss Virginia" was to be selected, until the military ball is held tomorrow night at Seaside Park.

In the only address of political nature during the day, Randolph Leigh, of Fairfax, who has announced he will oppose Senator Carter Glass for the Democratic nomination, declared unequivocally for immediate cash payment of the bonus, holding that "we are embarked on a program of inflation" which was constantly lessening the actual worth of payments claimed by the veterans.

Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, who will seek the nomination for Governor of the State in 1937, lauded the record of the Virginia legion and outlined a future program of creating greater interest in voting, eradication of sectionalism in the general assembly, and promoting better understanding among the nations of the earth.

Need of Air Corps Cited.

Importance of the Air Corps in National Defense was emphasized by Brig. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, of Langley Field, chief of staff of the Army Air Corps.

The visitors were welcomed by Mayor Roy C. Smith of Virginia Beach, Lawrence Lockwood, commander of Princess Annee Post, No. 113, hosts to the convention, Mrs. S. M. Simpson, president of the Princess Anne Auxiliary, and Representative Colgate W. Garden.

National Commander Frank N. Belgrano is expected to arrive tomorrow to deliver the principal address of the day.

Martinsburg Plant Will Market Cider

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 5.—Jefferson County orchardists are organizing a company and remodeling the Kearneysville creamery plant to make an unusual grade of cider, principally for beverage purposes.

They expect to have the plant in operation by September 15. The group consists of James Young, John Y. McDonald, Milton W. Burr and E. Lee Goldsborough. The creamery was built before the World War for an apple by-product plant. It was converted into a dairy products plant later.

The plant will manufacture and market three types of cider, clarified, pasteurized and fresh. Young, who will manage the plant, has been studying cider making methods at Amherst (Mass.) Experimental Station, where this type of experimental work has been leading.

They expect to market principally at the start in Washington and Baltimore, using roadside markets in that area as distributing agents; but will manufacture and sell practically the year round, the incorporators announced.

PWA Aid Asked For Financing Virginia Road

Hampton Roads Project Estimated to Cost $8,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

The Public Works Administration was asked yesterday to set aside funds for partial financing of a Hampton Roads, Va., pollution control project estimated to cost $8,000,000.

The request came from the Hampton Roads sewage disposal commission and was made in the expectation the Virginia Legislature would appropriate the State's contribution toward the project at its next session in January.

A delegation representing the commission and including Senator Harry F. Byrd and Representative S. Otis Bland, of Newport News, Va., also filed a public health service report on bacteriological conditions in Hampton Roads and the damages to industries resulting therefrom. This report estimated cost of construciton to rectify pollution conditions there at $8,000,000.

Governing bodies of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk, Smithfield, Hampton, Phoebus and the counties of Norfolk, Elizabeth City and Warwick, joined in the commission's request. The commission also asked that PWA increase its usual amount for such projects in the case of Hampton Roads, because of the location there of so many Federal establishments.

'Open Sea Lily,' Fossil Rarity, Unearthed by West Virginian

Finder Gives Smithsonian Its First Specimen of Early Sea Life.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 5.—A much-desired "opened sea lily" (technecrinus Andrewsi Hill), a form of which was not even possessed by the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, has been found in a sand mine at Berkeley Springs, W. Va., near here, by an amateur, Charles R. Frankenberry, of Martinsburg.

The sea lily, which is not a lily at all, but an animal, is estimated as more than 50,000,000 years old and was part of the earliest known animal life, living some time before the age of the fish.

Paleontologists have plenty of specimens of the closed sea lily, but this is one of the first examples of the lily ever found which had its mouth open. These animals had a long body, or trunk, that fastened itself to the bottom of the sea, and sometimes attained a length of 70 feet. The head of the lily, through tenacle-like growths in multiples of five, gathered its food at the water top.

Frankenberry's specimen was found in a peculiar formation of sandstone in an abandoned sandstone mine, and when he was unable to identify the lily, he took it to the Smithsonian, where he was told of the rareness of it. He has donated the fossil to the museum, although a plaster cast model of it has been presented to him, along with a specimen of the closed lily, by Smithsonian authorities.

Frankenberry, who has just recently become interested in geology and paleontology, believes that he has found at Berkeley Springs several other fossils of geological interest, among them a platocrinus hemisphericus, a form of animal life much older than the lily.

'Shore' Ties Up Fleet For Storm Backlash; Counts Tornado Loss

Tug Ashore After Blast Sets It Afire

Explosion on Craft in Chester River Burns Skipper.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., Sept. 5.—The hull of the tugboat C-O, continued to blaze and send forth billows of smoke as it laid beached tonight in shallow water of the Chester River, only 100 yards from the pier of the Chester River Yacht and Country Club.

The fire followed an explosion in the galley this morning as the tug was towing an oil barge into dock here. The barge was cut loose and the burning tug left to drift down the river.

Tug Finally Grounds.

Several thousand dollars worth of boats were endangered for a time as the flaming derelict drifted toward the yacht club pier. Local firemen drove their apparatus to the pier to prevent any other boats catching fire.

The tug, however, finally ran into shallow water and grounded. The fire was fed by some 1,300 gallons of fuel oil. It was left to burn itself out.

Capt. J. F. Stevens, of Baltimore, was burned about the arms by the explosion. He was treated by the first-aid squad of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company.

Hatch Blown Off.

The origin of the explosion was believed to have been in a cook stove in the galley. The forward hatch was blown off as Capt. Stevens was passing on the deck.

The oil barge was not in any great danger. After being cut loose, it was pulled into dock. It is the Majestic, owned by the Gray Towing Co. of Norfolk, Va.

Aboard the tugboat besides Capt. Stevens was the crew of L. C. Davis and Fran Stevens, both of Baltimore, and P. F. Kerr, who lived on it. Elmer Hoffman, of Ridgely, was on the oil barge.

Goodell, chairman of the Republican State central committee of Frederick County, is expected to be named superintendent of Springfield State Hospital at Sykesville, when the board of managers of that institution meets tomorrow. Dr. Goodell, who has been a member of the board of managers for years, is said to have the almost unanimous approval of the individual members of the board. Dr. Hosea W. McAdoo announced his resignation as superintendent early this week. Dr. Goodell has intimated he will accept the appointment, if offered.

Water Front Property Moved in Fear of High Tide.

Warnings Hoisted From Capes South

Heavy Tobacco Damage Reported; Virginia Beach Safe.

By the Associated Press.

Wet through by torrential downpours Maryland waited to see what today would bring in the line of further weather disturbances as the tropical hurricane moves up the Eastern seaboard.

The Eastern Shore battened down hatches and lashed things tight yesterday and last night preparing for high winds and high tides today. Practically all boats of the oyster and fishing fleets were tied up and property in warehouses along the water front was moved back to guard against damage from high tides.

Storm warnings were hoisted from the Virginia capes southward yesterday, with the Weather Bureau predicting gusts of wind and rain throughout the night. Virginia Beach, where hundreds of legionnaires are gathered for their annual convention, was safely outside the storm range. The tropical tempest, coming out of Georgia, will pass out into the Atlantic outside of Cape Hatteras, weather men at Norfolk said.

They said there would be no serious danger, but that wind and tide might rise higher than usual.

On the Eastern Shore of Virginia and on the Chesapeake Bay shores, fishermen stayed ashore, taking no chances of getting caught in any backwash of the blow.

Rain was reported from all parts of Virginia during the day, with Staunton and Lynchburg recording the greatest falls.

Southern Maryland was handicapped in its rehabilitation work by downpours yesterday and it appeared that the tobacco crop of that section would suffer irreparable damage. Further reports were received of damage in the wake of the tornado which tore through three counties of that section, but there were no reports of loss of life.

Tobacco in barns which were flattened by the high wind was ruined and it appeared that much of the tobacco in curing barns not struck by the wind would be damaged greatly by continued moisture.

Corn and tomato crops of Southern Maryland also suffered heavily in the tornado and torrential rains which followed.

Despite the rains, there was little interruption of traffic on Maryland highways.

It appeared in western Maryland that the four days of almost continuous rain was near an end. The clouds broke and at times a feeble sun shone.

Cubs Trim Phils in 11th, 3-2, to Go Into Virtual Tie With Giants

Demaree Hits Single With Three On

Two Walks and Error Fill Bases and Set Stage for Blow.

Root Wins 12th of '35; Chicagoans Move Up in Games Won.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Frand Demaree's single with the bases loaded and one out in the eleventh inning gave the challenging Cubs a 3-to-1 overtime victory over Philadelphia today and moved them into second places in games over the Giants, who lost at Cincinnati. The Giants, however, led in percentages, .611 to .609.

A walk to Galan, Camilli's fumble of Herman's sacrifice and a walk to O'Dea filled the bases for the winning blow, George Watkins' sixteenth home run of the season in the sixth and a run scored on Chiozza's single, Cavarretta's fumble after two out in the eighth, tied the score and necessitated extra innings after the Cubs took an early two-lead on singles by Demaree, Cavarretta and Hack in the second.

Charley Root went the route against Curt Davis for his twelfth victory. Each pitcher allowed seven hits.

Bucs' Rally Wins Over Dodgers, 5-4

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 5.—An eighth-inning rally, marked by two doubles and a home run, gave the Pirates four runs and a 5-to-4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Facing a three-run deficit as they started the eighth, the bucs got into the running when Pep Young doubled and Gus Suhr belted a home run. After Tom Padden beat out a bunt, Watson Clark was replaced by Emil Leonard, who stayed in the game just long enough to put the winning run on base with a walk to Pinch-hitter Red Lucas. Then Van Mungo replaced Leonard and Bud Hafey welcomed him with a double that scored the deciding runs.

The dodgers collected their runs by bunching five hits off Ralph Birkofer in the sixth and seventh frames.

Kling Making Good As Baseball Prexy

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Sept. 5.—Johnny Kling, the black-browed fellow who caught for the Chicago Cubs back in the days of that famous double-play combination, Tinker to Evers to Chance, is wearing his best baseball grin again.

The Kansas City American Association Club, which he took over last year when it was wallowing in last place, is kicking up the dust in first division and the rabid fans are trooping back to Muehlebach field.

Already more than 110,000 have poured through the turnstiles to see the Blues in contrast with 71,000 for all of last season and six home games remain to be played.

"If we draw 125,000 we'll break even," said the man who once swung his bat at the offerings of Christy Mathewson and Ed Walsh.

Cards Win, 15-3; Terry Moore Gets 6 Hits

Champions Retain Margin; Modern Record Tied by Outfielder.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 5.—Young Terry Moore, the recruit who made good, equaled a modern major league batting record today as the world champion Cardinals lambasted the demoralized Boston Braves, 15 to 3, to retain top standing the National League.

The triumph, second in a row over the lowly Braves, enabled the league-leaders to keep their 2½-game margin over the Chicago Cubs, who climbed pass New York into second place by turning back Philadelphia. The Giants' loss to Cincinnati left them three games out of first place.

Moore, St. Louis' clouting outfielder, knocked five singles and a double in the Cardinals' 19-hit assault to tie the modern major league record for consecutive safeties in a 9-inning game.

Held by Robinson.

The old record was held by the late Wilbert Robinson, who hit safely in each of seven trips to the plate in a game he played in 1892 on the old Baltimore Orioles. The modern record has been equaled many times.

The Cardinals opened with a shower of base hits that sent Fred Frankhouse, clever right-hander, from the mound at the end of the second inning. His replacement, "Juck" Betts, fared no better, the world champions garnering 11 more safeties from him in the last six innings.

The Redbirds, aided by five Boston errors, concentrated ten of their tallies in two innings with five-run batfests in the third and sixth. Phil Collins, who returned to the Cardinal line-up as a starting hurler, limited the Braves to eight hits, three of which came in Boston's 2-run rally in the ninth.

Tribe Splits Two With Red Sox

Grove Bows in 1st, 8-1, as Hudlin Gives Up Only 6 Hits.

Ferrell Wins 22d, 6-1, Allows Two Blows Until 7th.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Sept. 5.—The Red Sox couldn't score enough runs to win for Lefty Grove today, but they could and did for Wes Ferrell and as a result they split a double-header with the third-place Cleveland Indians. Cleveland won the opener, 8 to 1, while the Sox and Ferrell took the afterpiece, 6 to 1.

Hudlin hurled six-hit ball in the first clash and virtually clinched the game when he smacked a home run with one on base in the second inning. The Sox made it close until the ninth, when five hits produced four more Idian tallies.

Ferrell, hanging up his twenty-first mound victory of the season, turned in a superb performance against his old team for seven innings. He gave only two hits and not a ball went out of the infield until Joe Vosmik singled in the seventh.

Five More Hits.

In the last two frames Ferrel weakened a bit, giving five more hits and leaving the bases filled each time. The Sox put the game on ice in the fifth when they nicked Thornton Lee for two runs on doubles by Mel Almada and Carl Reynolds, plus a walk and a fly. Bill Werber stole home with a fourth run in the seventh. Relief Flinger Clint Brown was found for two more tallies in the eighth after Pinch Hitter Ralph Winegarner had knocked in the only Indian run.

2 Rookies Star As Reds Top Giants, 4-1

Hollingsworth, on Mound; Kampouris Triples With Three On.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 5.—A pair of Cincinnati rookies, Alex Kampouris and Al Hollingsworth, combined their efforts to give the New York Giants' pennant quest another severe setback today. The pitching of Hollingsworth and the hitting of Kampouris gave the Reds a 4-to-1 victory.

While the Giants were losing, both of their pennant rivals, the Cubs and the Cardinals, won, and as a result New York was kept in second place only by the percentages. They dorpped a half game behind the Cubs but still held the edge over Chicago, .611 to .609, because they had played fewer games. The victory sent the Reds into sixth place ahead of the Phillies, who lost ahead of Chicago.

Hollingsworth gave a fine exhibition of pitching in the "clutches," although he was touched for ten blows. Just half of those Giant hits were made by Manager Bill Terry, who had a perfect day at the plate and scored the only New York run.

Triple With Three On.

The Reds won the game in the same inning when Kampouris belted a three-bagger with the bases loaded. Young Clydell Castleman, who gave only seven hits in his six innings on the hill, was touched for three of them in that frame.

The Giants had 13 men left on base.

Winchester Will Lose Several Star Gridmen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 5.—When Coach J. N. Ochs, new Handley High School football mentor, checked his list of players at the first assembly of gridiron talent here tonight, he found several valuable players missing.

Among them are Stimmel, quarter back, and C. Baker, Clevenger and Grim, guards, who have graduated. Armel, center; Lineburg, end, and Ward, full back, on former elevens, will not be eligible this year because they have passed the 20-year age limit of the Cumberland Valley Association.

Navy Gridders Stage Drill In Rain

88 Candidates Report for First Practice; Watch Movies in Morning.

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 5.—Members of the Naval Academy football squad showed that they were at home on water today when they went through the opening drill of the practice season in a heavy downpour of rain.

The varsity squad of 88 players reported to Lieut. Thomas J. Hamilton, head coach, in the morning. They were given a physical drill in the armory and watched motion pictures of previous Navy games.

With the rain falling in sheets, Hamilton sent the squad out on Faragut Fiel in the afternoon for the initial workout of the 1935 season. The players wore white track suits.

While Hamilton circled about looking over the groups, Lieut. John H. Cross and Edgar E. (Rip) Miller, line coaches, put the linemen through a charging and starting drill and had them practicing shifts. Lieut. J. Weston Byng, end coach, drilled a group of ends in starts and in getting inside interference. A group of backs got a workout in handling a wet ball from John Wilson, back field coach.

Play Again Is Halted In U. S. Tennis Tourney

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 5 (AP).—For the third successive day, a heavy rain forced postponement of play in the national tennis championships today. Weather permitting, the field will pick up tomorrow where it left off on Monday.

Rice Prospects On Gridiron Bright

Eight Regulars Are Back; Drills Open Tuesday; G. W. on Card.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 5.—The Owls of Rice may fly high over the football fields again this autumn.

With eight regulars back from last season's championship eleven, plus a dozen promising graduates of the 1934 unbeaten freshman team, the Owls have an excellent chance of equalling or bettering their sowing of a year ago when they captured the Southwest Conference title and gained recognition as one of the most powerful aggregations in the land.

Their hope of going through the season without defeat is dimmed, however, by their difficult schedule of 11 games on successive Saturdays. They must play Texas, Christian, Southern Methodist, Louisiana State and George Washington away from home. Coach Jimmy Kitts, who is no pesimist, is afraid his charges will be tripped up at leastonce or twice. He thinks the Southwest Conference will be stronger than ever.

All-Conference Men.

Among the 21 veterans who will report for the initial practice at Rice Field next Tuesday are four members of the All-Conference eleven of 1934. They are John McCauley and Bill Wallace, two of the greatest backs in the South, "Primo" Miller, who promises to earn a place among the Nation's best tackles this season, and cagey John Sylvester, at end. Wallace was named on the All-America team last year.

The loss of Percy Arthur, Rice's captain and center in 1934, and Frank Steen, brilliant end who succumbed to ineligibility, will be felt. Kitts had been counting on "Babe" Wallace, brother of Bill, to fill Arthur's shoes, but the younger Wallace didn't make the scholastic grade. Two lettermen, Howard "Red" Nichols and Henry Bollman, are available, however. Charlie Moore, hard-charging sophomore lineman from San Antonio, could be shifted to center, but the coaches don't think it will be necessary.

The schedule:

September 21, St. Mary's of San Antonio at San Antonio (night); 28, Louisiana State at Baton Rouge (night).
October 5, Duquesne at Houston; 12, Creighton at Houston; 19, Southern Methodist at Dallas; 26, Texas at Austin.
November 2, George Washington at Washington, D. C.; 9, Arkansas at Houston; 16, Texas A. and M. at Houston; 23, Texas Christian at Fort Worth; 30, Baylor at Houston.

Bicycle Race Won By Grocery Clerk

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 5.—Cecil Hursey, 20-year-old Savannah (Ga.) grocery clerk, today won the 25-mile bicycle race which opened the American amateur bicycle championship program.

The race was held in a steady downpour and in a strong wind, causing many spills. However, all of the 27 starters finished.

Trailing Hursey across the finish line was Bobby Bliss, of the Italian Cycling Club, Los Angeles. Bliss' teammate, Charley Morton, took third place.

Hursey's time for the 25 miles was 1 hour 11 minutes 23 2-5 seconds. Bliss was a fifth of a second behind.

2 Golf Events Postponed By Rain

P.G.A. Qualifying Off Until Tuesday, Times Play Until Friday.

TWO important golfing events scheduled for today have been postponed because of the heavy rain.

The Middle Atlantic P. G. A. sectional qualifying trials at Rolling road, Catonsville, Md., were put off until next Tuesday, with the same pairings and starting times for the field of 33 professionals to prevail.

Postponed until next Friday was the annual Times Cup tournament slated this morning at Army and Navy Country Club. Mrs. Roy C. Miller, of Kenwood, District Women's Golf Association tournament chairman, said entries for this tournament would be received up until next Wednesday. A field of 68 already is entered.

The P. G. A. trials to determine the two men who will represent this section in the National Proper at Oklahoma ity next month thus will be played two days before the start of the $2,500 Calvert Open championship scheduled on the same course. Maryland State Golf Association officials last night pointed out that this was a good break for the contestants in the P. G. A. trials, since the postponement until Tuesday will enable them to remain over in Baltimore and have an additional day to tune up for the big 72-hole money classic.

Washington golf courses were veritable quagmires yesterday. Even if the rain subsides today, they won't be in real playable condition until tomorrow or Sunday, greenkeepers pointed out.

The match at Rock Creek between the teams of Wiffy Cox, of Kenwood; Frankie Strafaci, young national public links champion, and Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, and Claude Rippy, District municipal champion, is definitely off, since Strafaci is to leave today for Cleveland to compete in the national amateur.

District friends of Maurice McCarthy, former Georgetown golf star and member of the Walker Cup team, will be particularly interested in the announcement that he will compete in the national amateur next week. McCarthy missed out by a stroke in the sectional trials at Cleveland, but three of the regular qualifiers withdrew, and, McCarthy, an alternate, thus won himself a berth. He will be playing over his home course.

Entries for the "Downtown" tournament scheduled to open next Tuesday at East Potomac will close Sunday night with B. Harry Graham, course manager.

Al Houghton and his staff at Indian Spring are hoping for a better break in the weather when Jimmy Thomson, New Jersey golfing star, and Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., play at Indian Spring again on Sunday, September 22. Wiffy Cox, Kenwood professional, may be invited to play against the invading stars, it is understood.

Harris Balks Weaver's Recall

Wants to Give Chance to Other Young Hurlers Rest of Season.

Double-Headers Pile Up; Estellela to Play in Game Tomorrow.

ON the assumption that Bucky Harris will be the Nats' manager next season and thus responsible for the team's efforts in 1936, Bucky Harris yesterday vetoed Clark Griffith's recall of Monte Weaver from the Albany club for a new trial with Washington during the waning weeks of the season.

"We are counting on Weaver next season and he will report to training camp, but I'd rather see what some of our other young pitchers can do before the season ends," said Harris.

Asked what young pitchers he referred to, Harris was honestly stumped. "Well, er, yah got me there, I guess. But somewhere, we're going to get some young pitchers. The next few days will tell whether Chattanooga needs Dick Lanahan any longer and he'll probably be here next week. We'll pitch him as soon as he arrives. There's a young fellow named Bill Phebus we bought from the Western League who'll probably join us soon. Then there's Henry Coppola, who says he's ready to pitch again."

Estellela Is Called.

The first rookie to break into the Nats' lineup will be Roberto Estellela, the Cuban third baseman who has been called from the Nats' Harrisurg farm, where he led the Keystone State League with his 18 home runs. He boasts a batting average of .322.

Estellela will relieve Cecil Travis at third base in the second game of tomorrow's double-header, at which the Cuban Ambassador will be an honored guest. After Estellela has had his fling at the job, Buddy Lewis, from Chattanooga, will be put on trial at the post.

Harris wants a longer look at young Jimmy Starr, the Albany lad who has done everything well behind the bat but hit. Starr's handling of the pitchers and his throwing have laready earned him a tri

Colt Is Victor In Duel With Chatuga

Garden Message Third; Daily Double Returns $79.70 Mutuel.

By the Associated Press.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., Sept. 5.—Kept under restraint through most of the mile and 70 yards of the featured fifth race here today, the Liberty Lane Stable's Stickhandle won by a head from Jess Spencer's Chatuga.

The latter, making her first start on this track after three victories in five starts, set a fast pace through the heavy going right from the start and was several lengths in front of T. P. Morgan's Garden Message right up to the head of the stretch with Stickhandle running third. Rounding the turn for home, Garden Message moved on the outside of Chatuga and slowly but surely cut down the daylight between them.

Colt Moves Up.

This keen duel near the center of the track left Stickhandle room near the rail and the Cohort colt moved up with a relish for the going and just nipped Chatuga.

The latter was a length and a half in front of Garden Message, with Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Apolly fourth. The time was 1:44 2-5. Stickhandle paid $28.30, $10.80 and $5.40. Chatuga paid $5.80 and $4.30, while Garden Message returned $3.40.

The daily double today paid $79.70, with 193 tickets sold on the combination of Golden Duchess in the first race and Grenadine in the third.

Three Morgan Partners Form Security Firm

Morgan, Stanley, Inc., to Have Capital of $7,500,000.

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 5.—A $7,500,000 investment company, formed by partners and associates who aided in handling the investment business of J. P. Morgan & Co., was announced tonight.

Harold Stanley, William Ewing and Henry S. Morgan all have withdrawn from the Morgan firm as partners, while Perry E. Hall and Henry S. York, jr., have withdrawn from partnership in the Morgan affiliate in Philadelphia, Drexel & Co., to form the new underwriting organization.

The withdrawal for formation of the new investment company follows entry of J. P. Morgan & Co. into the field of commercial banking more than a year ago when banks were forced to divorce their securities affiliates. The Morgan and Drexel firms will continue as private bankers.

The new firm, to be known as Morgan, Stanley & Co., Inc., will occupy offices in the First National Bank Building, at 2 Wall street, commencing September 16.

Big Transactions Handled.

Until the banking act of 1933 forced its withdrawal from the underwriting field last year, J. P. Morgan & Co. handled a heavy volume of investment offerings. They financed British purchases in the United States during the World War, floated big international loans here, and took a major part in the financing of American transportation.

John M. Young and A. N. Jones, manager of the bond and statistical department of J. P. Morgan & Co., are to be executive officers of the new corporation. Common stock of the corporation is to be held exclusively by its officers and staff. Preferred shares will be held by members of the group and by individual partners of J. P. Morgan & Co., a statement of J. P. Morgan & Co. on the new organization said:

"The withdrawal of these partners and associates and their formation of a separate and independent securities company is, we consider, a logical step, following upon our decision a year ago to carry on our banking business rather than the securities business, thus acting in accordance with the banking and securities provisions of the banking act of 1933, confirmed by the banking act of 1935, just enacted. We believe that the members of the new organization will be able, with the ample experience they have had heretofore, to serve usefully the investment interests of the community."

Foreign Shortage Advances Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—Higher grain prices went hand in hand today with reports that European buying of Canadian wheat is on the biggest scale witnessed in two years. Broadening of overseas demand for wheat was attributed largely to virtual stoppage of offerings from Argentina and Australia, owing to persistent adverse new crop prospects and to lack of normal old crop reserves.

Wheat in Chicago closed nervous, ⅞ to 1¾ above yesterday's finish; December, 92¼ to 92¼; corn, ⅛ to ¼ up; December, 56⅝ to 56¾; oats, ⅛ to ½ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

Corn and oats received much of their strength from the action of wheat. Cool weather over many sections where the corn crop is backward aided in establishing advances. Provisions went higher, responsive to hog price gains.

New Deal Ideas May Be Applied By Bulgar King

Sifts Programs of U. S. and Other Lands for Brain Trust.

Sofia (AP).—King Boris, cooking up new policies for Bulgaria, is drawing on the recipes of Roosevelt, Hitler, Stalin and Mussolini.

The Balkan king has a special fancy for some of the Rooseveltian experiments, and indications are that when his plans are complete Bulgaria will have a modified brain trust.

Professor Heads Cabinet.

He took his first step in this direction when he ousted the government of Gen. Zlateff last April and appointed Andree Toscheff, veteran professor of botany, as premier.

Next Boris borrowed the idea of concentration camps from Nazi Germany, and many Protogerovists, Michailovists and Communists are said to live peacefully united now in these camps.

Then the king applied Stalin's system of banishment to two of the best known Bulgarian generals, Volkoff and Veltscheff, who instigated coups d'etat in 1923 and 1934.

"Blackshirt" Plan Adopted.

King Boris also admires Mussolini's method of putting national enthusiasm into the hearts of the subjects. So he ordered such nationalpatriotic organizations as the "Nationalni Legioni" and the "Rodna Zastita," which were dessolved after the coup d'etat in May, 1934, to be reorganized as a sort of Bulgarian blackshirt group.

Also to inspire national sentiment the Bulgarian statesman, Stephan Stambuloff, was declared a national hero and all Bulgarian schoolbooks stress his achievements. Stambuloff defended the principality of Bulgaria in 1895 against Russia's attempt to swallow this then not fully independent country.

Scandinavian Ships Busy.

Stockholm (AP).—Shipping in Scandinavia has shown a marked improvement, partly a seasonal betterment, reports revealing a drop in laidup tonnage in Sweden from 172 ships of 233,643 tons on May 1 to 79 ships of 125,411 tons on June 1. In Norway laidup tonnage dropped in the same period from 156 ships of 563,000 tons to 94 ships of 424,000 tons.

Youths Operate 'Dry' Beer Garden

Atmosphere Is Real, but Drinks Are Soft.

Ferndale, Mich. (U.P.).—A beerless beer garden is operated here at the Headquarters of Youth, Inc.

Amid potted plants and inclosed by a white picket fence, the 400 members of the organization enjoy all the atmosphere found in an outdoor drinking establishment—without the drinks.

The banana split supplants the wassail bowl, and the chocolate soda wears the crown usually carried by the foamy, amber brew of other establishments. And the pretzel has been replaced by the more genteel ladyfinger.

This drinkless drinking place is a social experiment to determine "what can be done to keep young people out of drinking places?" and was made possible by a $500 gift from Frederick M. Alger, member of the State liquor control commission.

Members of Youth, Inc., range from 16 to 25.

Scalping Survivor Lived to Win Fame

Infant Was Left for Dead After Indian Raid.

Prairie Du Chien, Wis. (U.P.).—Time was when life at Sugar Loaf Hill near here wasn't so sweet.

It was at Sugar Loaf Hill that the shot was fired that started the bloody Winnebago War 107 years ago and nearly ended the life of a woman who was destined to be a famous frontier mother, a recent survey by Dr. J. P. Scanlan, local historian, revealed.

Mary Gagnier was a few months old when Chief Red Bird of the Winnebagos, seeking revenge on the erroneous report that two of his hostages had been slain at Fort Snelling, killed her father, slashed her throat and scalped her. Her mother and brother fled, leaving her for dead.

Settlers found the infant alive and nursed her back to health. She became the mother of 13 children.

Anything for a Lift.

Turlock, Calif. (AP).—It took the "smallest" automobile to give the "biggest" hitch-hiker a ride. Ben Wise, 26, 365-pounder from New York City, arrived here in a midget car, which he said was the only one which would stop when he stood on the highway trying to get a lift here from Los Angeles.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

STRANGE as it seems, the first submarine warfare dates back to the beginning of United States history, when a crude yet ingenious one-man submarine attacked a British frigate lying at anchor in New York harbor.

The submarine, designed and built by David Bushnell, was hand operated. For a quick dive, water could be admitted into the bottom of the boat, later to be pumped out by hand when the craft was ready to rise.

The torpedo was tied on the outside; with it was a screw arrangement so that the operator could attach it to an enemy ship. On the first attack, this submarine, called the "American Turtle," was actually brought up under the hull of the British warship Eagle in New York harbor—but the copper sheathing on the bottom of the ship was too heavy for the screw to penetrate. Unsuccessful thus far, the operator cut his torpedo free and propelled his submarine to safety. The torpedo floated to the surface where men aboard a captured British prize schooner saw it and hauled it aboard. The torpedo then exploded, killed three of the crew, blew up the ship and set it afire.

The word "lumber" is traced back to the name "Lombard" in northern Italy. The Lombards were noted for their money lending, and in England the word came to mean money lender or pawnbroker. By extension, it was also applied to things pawned, later to furniture and other things held by a pawnbroker, and finally to anything that is stored or piled up—such as lumber in the sense we know. Corruption of the original spelling changed Lombard into lumber.

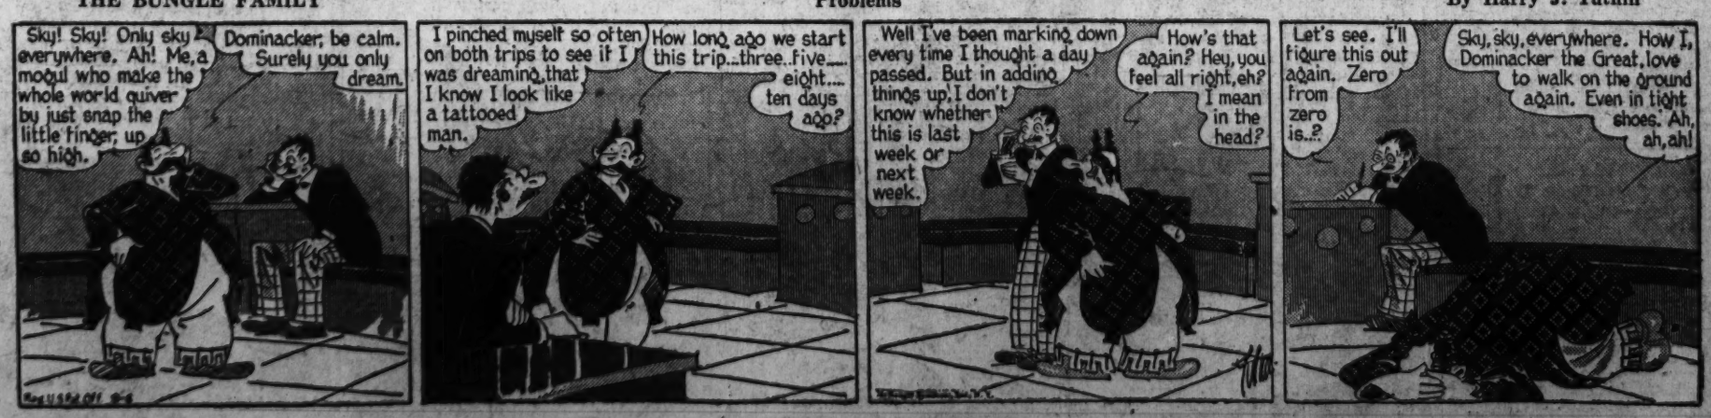
THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Problems — By Harry J. Tuthill



Sky! Sky! Only sky everywhere. Ah! Me, a mogul who make the whole world quiver by just snap the little finger, up so high.
Dominacker, be calm. Surely you only dream.
I pinched myself so often on both trips to see if I was dreaming, that I know I look like a tattooed man.
How long ago we start this trip...three...five.... eight.... ten days ago?
Well I've been marking down every time I thought a day passed. But in adding things up, I don't know whether this is last week or next week.
How's that again? Hey, you feel all right, eh? I mean in the head?
Let's see. I'll figure this out again. Zero from zero is...?
Sky, sky, everywhere. How I, Dominacker the Great, love to walk on the ground again. Even in tight shoes. Ah, ah, ah!
